Budget cut scenarios outlined before fincom

by Arlene Surprenant

A list of school department cuts totaling $449,882 was given to the Wilmington Finance Committee last Wednesday to guide members as they recommend reductions in the fiscal 1990 operating budget. Though fincom will be making its own recommendations, it will be up to voters at the October 16 special town meeting to dictate where the cuts will come. The action is necessary to meet a shortfall caused by a cutback in local aid.

School committee members were reluctant to release the list without first reviewing it and prioritizing the reductions proposed by Supt. William Fay. They plan to do this before town meeting.

Members agreed with Aldo Cairra that equal cuts should be made on the town's side. Fincom chairman Neil Waisnor said that Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski came back with a reduction list totaling a little over $283,000. Waisnor said he would ask Stapczynski to match the school figure.

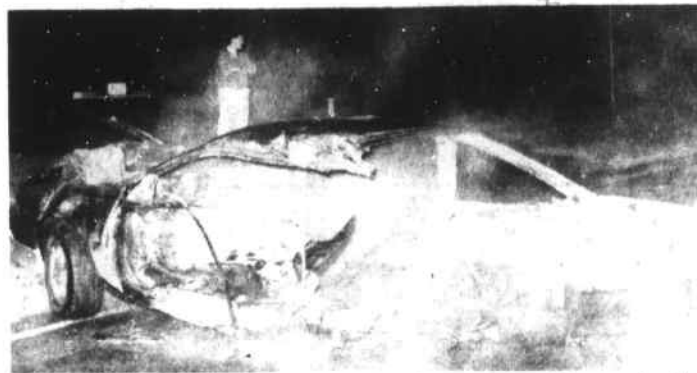

Discussion centered on whether the committee should release a list of possible reductions and where those reductions should come from. Waisnor explained though town meeting has line item control over the town's side of the budget, there is no such control over the school budget. By releasing possible areas to cut, said Waisnor, both voters and fincom are given some direction where the cuts will be made.

"All they're looking for is places to cut. You don't play poker that way," said member Aldo Cairra, who fought both against making close to $500,000 in cuts and publicizing the list. He claimed the committee was "working backwards" and voters would get the wrong impression and think the system could sustain more cuts, when, in fact, it couldn't. Chairman Bob Surran noted this was only a "worst case scenario" and residents were entitled to know the impact of their vote so they could make an informed decision this month.

Throughout the discussion there was a lot of uncertainty. For instance, the committee was uncertain how a gift of $110,685 from the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority would impact their budget. They also questioned if the schools would share in the monies being returned by Reading Light if negotiations are successfully concluded. All present seemed to agree on one point: selectmen, fincom members and school committeemen should be in accord when they go to town meeting.

Front

This 1989 Chevy Cavalier was ripped in two by the force of impact in a high-speed collision on the Nichols Street bridge early Sunday. Two young men escaped from the car before it caught fire.

Two escape inferno after high-speed crash

Two Wilmington men crawled to safety seconds before their car burst into flames after being torn in two in a high-speed accident on Nichols Street in Wilmington just before 1 a.m. Sunday morning.

Driver Charles Cushing, Jr., 21, of 47 Washington Ave., Wilmington and Therron Hamlin, 23, of Grace Drive escaped from the car without serious injury.

Their 1989 Chevy Cavalier hit a Chevy Blazer on the Nichols Street railroad bridge. The rear end of the Cavalier was torn off and hit the bridge railing. The front of the car continued on for another 600 feet, coming to rest at the bottom of the hill leading to the bridge, where it caught fire. After firefighters had extinguished the blaze, it caught fire a second time.

The driver of the other vehicle, John W. King of 2000 Whipple Rd., Tewksbury sustained chest injuries from the steering wheel of his vehicle. He was taken to Winchester Hospital.

Police have charged Cushing with operating under the influence of alcohol, driving to endanger, speeding, and failure to keep to the right.

Rear

The rear portion of the Chevy did not burn, having landed some 600 feet from the front portion.

$1.5m sought for school repairs

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington town officials are seeking a Prop 21/2 debt exemption of close to $1.5 million for repairs to the high school heating system and auditorium renovations. Residents will get a chance to vote on the work at this month's special town meeting.

According to Diane Allan, chairman of the Permanent Building Committee, the town plans on taking out a 10 year bond at an interest rate of 6 1/2 percent for the work. The impact of a new heating system on the tax rate would come out to 11 cents per $1,000 property valuation. Though bids will reportedly be taken October 13, a contract will not be awarded until residents agree to the job. The debt exemption on both the heating system and the auditorium repairs will require a 2/3 vote at town meeting and a simple majority at the November 4 special election in order to pass.

At last week's school committee meeting, members learned that the estimated cost of a new heating system, including the replacement of two out-dated boilers, would be $1,148,000. Roger Lessard, Superintendent of Public Buildings, said the two boilers are operable but he couldn't predict how long they would stay that way. Even if the override is approved, a new heating system wouldn't be in operation until October, 1990, he added.

Allan explained that should a boiler break down this winter, it will probably be during a cold spell and students could lose up to four weeks of school if a replacement is installed. The cost for a temporary boiler, she said, would be $40,000.

In referring to the auditorium work, Allan said her board opted to go with repairs costing an estimated $400,000. Included in that option is a new panel board, lighting, and improvements to the Adams Street entrance. Two other options under consideration were a "facelift" to the auditorium that wouldn't address program needs ($157,000) and a complete renovation including a catwalk and video studio ($800,000).

School committeemen took a vote in support of the override. However, though they unanimously supported the heating system repairs, they were split in their vote on the auditorium. Shirley Callan said though the work was needed, she couldn't justify it when so many cuts have to be made in the academic program. Both Brad Jackson and John DeMarco were outspoken in favor of the work, saying the town previously favored the repairs and they shouldn't wait much longer.

"I looked at that auditorium and I was ashamed. That auditorium is a disgrace," said Jackson. The final vote was four in favor, Callan opposed, and Andrea Paglia abstaining.

Rezoning article for Roberts Estate withdrawn

by Arlene Surprenant

In an unexpected move, petitioner Michael Greer withdrew his article to rezone his property on Burlington Avenue from R20 to high density business. The action came at Tuesday's finance committee hearing to review the 13 articles on the special town meeting warrant.

Greer bought the imposing stone house known as the old Roberts Estate when he moved from North Andover five years ago. After making $30,000 worth of renovations to the place and anticipating other "astronomical" costs for upkeep in the future, Greer decided to attempt a rezoning to convert his home to a restaurant. Greer told this paper he felt the conversion could open up the home for the enjoyment of Wilmington residents and put future renovations, said to total an additional $20,000, in the hands of businessmen who have such advantages as tax write-offs.

Greer said he withdrew the article because he hadn't realized the drawbacks of HDB zoning, which could open up the site to other less attractive businesses. He added though he wouldn't come back with a restaurant, he wasn't ruling out a conversion to something like a doctor's or a lawyer's office at a later date.

In September, the bank put his home on the auction block. In an unheard of move, he ended up bidding on the property and buying it back himself. He said in the past weeks, the strain on him and his family has been "really tremendous."

Part of the strain may have come from neighbors, who started a petition drive against the proposed article. The petition states that area residents "strongly oppose" the zoning change because a restaurant is "inappropriate" in a residential neighborhood and it poses a threat to their property values.

Anna St. Louis, a resident of Roberts Road for 14 years, said before the meeting that a restaurant use would "ruin the neighborhood" and lead to traffic and parking problems in the area. Realtor Anne Mahoney, who lives next door, had been in the forefront of the fight to stop the rezoning. She questioned the legality of the so-called spot zoning and noted such a use isn't conducive to a residential area.

Greer said afterwards he would have liked the chance to meet neighbors face to face to discuss the article.

"I wish they had had the guts (to meet with him). Neighbors should talk to each other," he said.

Reading woman injured

A Reading woman was seriously injured in an accident Monday evening at the intersection of Route 129 and the Route 93 ramp. Carole Giglio, a former Wilmington resident, was taken to Winchester Hospital with a broken hip and other injuries. She was driving the car at left, a Buick Skylark, which collided with a Pontiac Firebird driven by Philip DeMarco, 24, of 25 Oakdale Rd., Wilmington. He was cited for failure to use care in turning. The accident took place about 7 p.m. in heavy rain. (Photo by Dave Fitzgerald)

United States Army Band to perform in Tewksbury

Tewksbury is being invaded by the U.S. Army this weekend, and all are cordially invited.

The town of Tewksbury will play host to the 26th "Yankee" Division Band on Sunday, October 8, from 2-4 p.m. on the Town Common on Main Street. Last year, the U.S. Army band played a wide range of musical styles for a large crowd on the common, with music ranging from swing to contemporary.

In case of inclement weather, the Army band concert will be held at Tewksbury Memorial High School, off Pleasant Street. Concert goers are asked to bring their own lawn chairs, if the concert is held on the common as planned, as seating is limited and the ground is cold.

Snacks will be sold by the Homecoming Committee at the performance, at a nominal charge.

Prior to the open air concert, the Army band will be served a lunch at the Tewksbury V.F.W., on St. Mary's Road, courtesy of the club manager, Bill Hallisey.

Cease-fire ordered in ice cream war

by Arlene Surprenant

A strong warning was issued to three ice cream vendors on Monday by Health Director Greg Erickson and the Wilmington Board of Health.

Both Angelo and Annette Ciaramaglia and Tina Maynard were told to voluntarily stop their alleged harassment of each other or lose their retail food licenses.

"I am warning you that this balance is going to stop. That's the end of it," admonished an angry Erickson.

Maynard has food and vendor's permits to operate two ice cream trucks in town. She took over the Woodsies Hoodies truck and route three years ago. The Ciaramaglias also have the necessary permits to operate their one truck. They have been in business for a year.

Several incidents over the summer at Silver Lake and, more recently, at the Kidsplace playground, have frustrated police and other town officials who largely chose to stay out of the fray. Erickson told the Town Crier he invited both sides to Monday's meeting to go on record that the friction has to stop.

Annette Ciaramaglia claimed that Maynard subjected her fourteen year old daughter, who works part time on the truck, to foul language "on a daily basis," verbally abused her family, and told customers not to buy her product. She added that Maynard tried to get her and her husband to leave Silver Lake.

"I took it and took it and took it," said Ciaramaglia, adding that she realized something needed to be done when her daughter got "hysterical" and had to seek professional help.

Maynard, who resides in New Hampshire, claimed that the Ciaramaglias were "constantly" calling the police and trying to run her and her workers out of town. Maynard said she had documentation to prove her claim.

"This harassment has been going on three or four months," she added.

Maynard maintained that on July 4, Angelo drove his truck into her at Silver Lake, causing her to become "bedridden." As a result, she was bringing the Ciaramaglias to court. Annette disputes Maynard's charge. She claimed her husband jumped out of his truck and only spilled coffee on Maynard after she started banging on Angelo's vehicle.

The latest incident occurred the weekend of September 23 at Kidsplace, where both trucks were parked during a soccer game. Ciaramaglia reportedly called police over problems with a parking space and "something" that was said over an intercom. Health board chairman Jim Ficociello noted that the police report stated that Maynard's truck was blocking an emergency entrance.

Erickson told both parties he was tired of responding to complaints. He said both trucks need a licensed driver on board in case the vehicles have to be moved during an emergency. He added that verbal abuse and foul language was "not going to be tolerated" by his department.

Ficociello pointed out the continuing incidents do not set a good example for Wilmington youngsters in the vicinity. Using some stern words, he told both sides that operating their trucks in Wilmington is a "privilege" and not a right.

"One iota of trouble, and I mean one iota, and your licenses are gone. If you think we're kidding, try us," he challenged.

Selectmen grant beano permit to Youth Hockey

Wilmington Youth Hockey will be sponsoring Beano games every Monday from 6 to 11 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Wilmington.

At the board of selectmen's meeting Monday night, Bill Wallace sought a permit to operate the fundraising activity. It was mentioned profits from Beano will help reduce costs for youngsters in the ice hockey program and, at the same time, provide entertainment for town residents. Wallace said once youngsters reach age 8 or 9, it costs $500 to stay in the program. Selectmen voted unanimously in favor of the permit.

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR STRUCTURAL INSPECTION

Today, many home buyers are investing in a professional structural inspection before finalizing the sale. By choosing your inspector carefully and preparing for your structural, you can learn important facts about your new home and perhaps save thousands of dollars in the process.

Once you have a ratified sales agreement, the Realtor will help set up an appointment for you to see the home with your inspector. Even though you may get a written report of the inspection, take a notebook with you. If you have any questions, write them down ahead of time. Was there anything you noticed when you went through the house on your own? Were you concerned about any cracks in the walls, spots on the ceiling, or noises in the air conditioning system? When you are going through your new home with the inspector, remember that it's probably not quite perfect. You should come away, however, with a good understanding of what you are buying and how much maintenance will cost.

For solid advice on buying or selling real estate, consult the professionals at Kelley & Company. Please call us at 658-4171 or stop by our office at 20 Middlesex Avenue in Wilmington.

NOW'S THE TIME FOR TAX PLANNING

Too many people don't think about their taxes until about half past March, but this is the time you can make decisions and changes in the number that will determine your taxes next April.

It's an advantage to have longer use of your money before it's taxed. To this end, many self-employed individuals defer some of their year-end income to the beginning of the next year. Income that you get in January 1990 - deferred from December let's say - won't be taxed until April 1991.

Manipulating deductible expenses may payoff, too. If you think you will be in a higher bracket next year, you may want to defer some expenses to next year, when they'll be worth more.

Sell stock at the end? Many investors are watching to see what will happen to capital gains taxes. One option to lock in profits is to "sell short against the box;" any gains won't be taxable until the original stock is sold.

Recycling center to open Oct. 14

Start collecting your recyclable aluminum cans, glass jars, bottles, and newspaper. The Town of Wilmington will open its recycling drop-off site Saturday, October 14, 1989 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sunday, October 15 from 1 to 6 p.m. You will be able to drop off your recyclables on Saturdays only after the kickoff weekend from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Beginning October 21, yard leaves will be accepted at the drop-off site off Old Main Street (Route 38 near the Woburn line).

Several types of consumer packages are considered "recyclable" at this stage in Wilmington's recycling effort, and should be separated and dropped off at the site.

Aluminum cans are recyclable and should be rinsed out prior to being dropped off. You can separate aluminum from tin or steel based cans with a common magnet. Aluminum is not magnetic. Cans which are steel based should be discarded with your regular trash.

Glass bottles and jars are recyclable. Rinse them out, properly discard the covers. The labels may remain. Separate the glass at the drop off site in the three glass bins, one is for clear glass, one is for green glass and one is for brown glass. Slightly tinted glass is considered a colored glass and should be placed with the glass to which it is closest in color.

Newspaper should either be tied in bundles or deposited loosely in the newspaper bin. Do not include magazines or other types of paper.

As of October 21, yard leaves may be deposited at the recycling drop-off site. Leaves must be de-bagged, and residents should keep the bags.

Volunteers will be on location to assist residents and answer questions regarding this first phase of recycling. In the future, curbside pickup of recyclables is planned. For more information or interest in volunteering in Wilmington's recycling program, call the assistant town manager's office at 658-3311.

School committee seeks better communication

by Arlene Surprenant

A call for more communication roused the ire of Superintendent of Schools William Fay last Wednesday as he came under fire for an ad in the Boston Globe.

School committee member Shirley Callan complained that an ad costing $1066 to attract candidates for an in-house suspension position was placed by an ad agency for Wilmington schools. She seemed to feel that because of the tight financial situation in the school system, administrators should take care in spending funds. In addition, fellow committee members questioned why the ad was placed in the first place since they were under the impression the position wasn't being filled.

A tight-lipped Fay told Callan "we've run many ads for the same price and you had knowledge of that." He said, in the past, the ads have appeared on the warrant which is signed by committeemen.

Fay said he made the decision to hire an in-house suspension teacher when high school principal Paul Fleming told him how valuable the position was. He said it fell within his duties to make that judgement as well as to place an ad to seek the best possible candidates, which has always been a priority with the school committee. Callan argued that it costs nothing to seek qualified candidates through the Wilmington system. Fay said the ad drew 80 responses and he insisted the money was "well spent." Some committeemen asked for better communication in the future.

In other business, Callan questioned the increased price of field trips and the hiring of an assistant track coach without a policy in place to accept anonymous donations to pay his salary.

Callan said she was concerned with the increase in the cost of buses to transport students on field trips. Under Trombly Motor Coach, the cost for one bus had been $95. Under Blanchard, she said, the cost per bus is $215. She claimed if the system goes with Blanchard, students will have to pay four dollars for each trip in addition to other costs. Fay said, under the terms of the bus contract, he felt they weren't locked into Blanchard for field trips. He added he was checking this out with legal counsel. Callan and other members were concerned with paying a salary to a newly hired assistant track coach since there was no mechanism in place to accept anonymous donations. The committee agreed to hire the assistant coach at a prior meeting, provided the money wouldn't come out of the budget.

Fay said the board was making "a mountain out of a molehill" since the local businessmen who agreed to fund the salary would most likely make themselves known to the committee. Aldo Caira asked that a letter be sent to the committee revealing the donors' names. He noted they were under no obligation to make the names public. Others agreed with his suggestion.

Trash trivia

Here are some little known facts about the benefits of recycling and the growing problem of what to do with our trash.

DID YOU KNOW...

- Recycling the print run of a Sunday edition of the New York Times would leave 75,000 trees standing.

- In Rockford, Illinois, a garbage lottery awards $1,000 each week to the lucky resident whose trash bags are inspected and found to be free of newspapers and aluminum cans.

- Each year our nation generates enough garbage to fill a convoy of trash trucks reaching half way to the moon.

- In general, 80 percent of our trash is landfilled, 10 percent is incinerated, and 10 percent is recycled.

- The Environmental Protection Agency has set a national goal of reducing and recycling 25 percent of our waste by 1992.

- Per person, we produce an average of 3.5 pounds of garbage daily or 1,300 pounds per person per year.

- Recycling helps in reducing air and water pollution and preserves our most precious natural resources, trees and oil.

- Just one quart of motor oil not disposed of properly can contaminate 250,000 gallons of water.

- Each recycled beverage can saves the energy equivalent of a half can of gasoline.

- About half the consumer waste stream can be economically recycled.

- Aluminum can be recycled indefinitely.

- Composting is most advanced in Europe. France alone has over 100 plants producing 800,000 tons of compost each year.

- In the densely populated northeast section of the United States, the average fee for landfill disposal is already more than twice that for any other region.

- Some retailers are purchasing reverse vending machines to accept returned containers and disburse deposit refunds.

- It takes 17 trees to make one ton of paper.

- Over 200 million trees are saved each year due to nationwide re-cycling efforts.

- Manufactured recycled paper produces 75 percent less air pollution and 35 percent less water pollution than paper manufactured from virgin wood pulp.

- Nearly one dollar of every $10 Americans spend for food and beverages pays for packaging.

- The EPA predicts that a third of the municipal landfills operating today will reach full capacity by 1993.

Gun-owners and their usually formidable lobbying work fell to pieces on Monday as the Massachusetts House voted overwhelmingly to ban semi-automatic weapons in Boston. In a stunning defeat for the NRA and the Gun Owners Action League (GOAL), law enforcement officials captured an impressive victory as the House cast a lopsided 104-44 vote approving a Boston home rule petition making it illegal to own a semi-automatic weapon in the Hub.

Local Reps. Beckwith and Grace voted for the bill, with James Miceli voting against.

The bill, expected to be sent to the Senate on Tuesday, does provide a grandfather clause for those presently owning these weapons. To continue ownership they will be required to seek a special permit, or risk a fine of $1,000.

The significance of the bill is that it may soon give birth to a banning of all semi-automatic weapons throughout the Commonwealth. Beacon Hill observers predict that the victory of the Boston home rule petition, which came largely as a surprise, will bolster the efforts of gun control advocates, who ironically enough have not fared well in the House previously.

But the banning of semi-automatic weapons is already being criticized as a piecemeal attempt to deal with the issue of crime in Massachusetts.

Michael Yacino is the executive director of the Gun Owners Action League and believes that most legislators supporting the gun bill weren't voting on its merits. "If they fight crime by going after people already licensed, it's a waste," said Yacino.

Yacino's concern centers around the fact that the banning of semi-automatic weapons in Boston will only serve to scrutinize those who legally possess them in the first place, whether it be for hunting (semi-automatics are used for hunting because of their rapid trigger abilities) or competitive target shooting. Unfortunately it appears that both activities are increasingly unacceptable in a political world groping for "solutions" to drugs and crime, both of which seem increasing intertwined, even synonymous.

So the legislature votes to ban semi-automatic weapons while the children of Roxbury are either selling drugs or being shot by those who do. And if a state rep. thinks that banning the future sale of semi-automatic weapons will in any way put a dent in this daily social combat, he/she can guess again.

The drug-lords and their princes will hardly be motivated to surrender their automatics to Boston Police Commissioner Mickey Roache. "This only impacts people who obey the law," said Michael Yacino.

To think otherwise may be the height of naivete. As Yacino put it, "There's no disincentive here for a criminal not to be a criminal."

Take the Bartley Fox act. In speaking with both the chairman of the House public safety committee and Yacino, one finds a consensus on both sides of this issue that criminals prosecuted under the famous gun statute are consistently plea bargaining their way to light sentences.

Unfortunately, instead of enforcing the laws already on the books, or creating new ones that really take a bite out of crime (thank you Mr. McGruff), we see 104 state reps. rally behind a wimp bill that won't matter for anything in a state under attack by increasing crime and a growing drug addiction.

Michael Yacino's organization has introduced a bill with some teeth. It requires a mandatory five year prison sentence for anyone committing a crime with a firearm. But instead of passing something tough like this, the legislature bans semi-automatics.

Big deal.

The criminals will continue to receive their arsenals, tucked away in small boats which slip quietly into the coastal inlets of New England, under the cover of night.

If we really cared about crime and drugs we'd have a governor with the nerve to pass a death penalty. If we wanted to satisfy the psychological fears that some people have with guns, we'd categorize armed robbery and assault as capital crimes. If we were actually sickened by drugs and its infection of every inter-city kid, we'd mobilize 2,000 drug agents and sweep every street corner of all the human trash. Then we'd go after that jet set attorney from Weston who supports a death industry by purchasing his weekly fix.

Both the user and supplier could be jailed together, and if were lucky they'd fight it out.

But none of this will happen.

This is the age of wimpy politicians, all of whom bask in the still glowing image of J.F.K., only wishing they had his zeal and intestinal fortitude.

The best leaders of today can do is end the legal sale of semi-automatic rifles.

Don't hold your breath for a drop in the crime rate next year.

Hazardous Waste Pickup Day mishandled

by Bill Conlon

How best to spend a limited number of dollars is a tough issue in Tewksbury, as in all towns these days. Simply put, you can't have it all. But when a good and valuable program suffers from a lack of funds, the benefits must be weighed against the losses.

The town needs police cruisers, but funding for a new fleet was killed in the recent Special Town Meeting. The existing cars can be coaxed into another year of service, but it won't be easy.

Roads must be paved, but patching and new paving accounts also felt the budget knife. Funds remain for patching and paving, but not enough to do a complete job. Priorities must be set.

But when the town held a Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day recently, the shortage of funds caused an absurd problem.

The hazardous waste collection began at 9 a.m. and was scheduled to run until 1 p.m. The collection began at the appointed hour, but the program was halted before 10 a.m., before an hour had elapsed, when the money ran out. At least 25 cars were lined up at the DPW building, trunks full of old paint, solvents, used motor oil, etc., when the end came.

At the Annual Town Meeting in May, a long discussion was held before any funds at all were given for the hazardous waste pickup. Even then, the program was only funded at $20,000 -- or enough to barely run a single day's collection.

At the latest Special, that sum was cut back another $5,000 in an effort to reduce the town budget. Only $15,000 was left to carry out the September 23 chemical waste pickup. In the past three years, not once has the pickup program lasted until the scheduled finishing time. Picking up household hazardous waste is a good idea, but it hasn't yet been successfully carried out in Tewksbury.

The contractor for the chemical pickup day, Clean Harbors, Inc., charged $2,500 just for setup. A section of the DPW parking lot was covered with plastic, then plywood flooring was laid down. A large dumpster was put in place and lined with plastic, and barrels were lined up to receive the various chemicals, while the crew dressed in paper suits and disposable gloves. It was easy to see where the setup cost went.

What was not so easy was having to tell the people in line that the funds had run out and the program was over -- something that health board chairman Bill Lindsay was forced to do before an hour was up. Clean Harbors charges by the barrel to dispose of different wastes, and it is easier to dispose of used motor oil (at $180 per 55 gallon barrel) than it is for old paint ($300 per barrel). The money went fast as the barrels filled up. Only residents were allowed, and there were no contractors "hogging" the allotted barrel space.

Wilmington, on the other hand, had the same funding problem but it was handled differently. When the same budgeted sum of $15,000 ran out in Wilmington, the organizers kept right on collecting the chemicals until everybody was happy. It ended up costing $24,000 and a funds transfer by the FinCom handled the overrun.

Unfortunately, Tewksbury residents are now left with no legal way to dispose of their chemical trash. They may sneak a can of paint into the weekly curbside trash pickup, but then the trash haulers are stuck with it, and they'll be more cautious next week.

Dumping chemicals down the drain is dangerous, as the waste will then cause problems at the sewage treatment plant, or will soak into the ground around the leaching field. Both alternatives are utterly unacceptable. So too is dropping the cans along the roadside, where the unsuspecting landowner will be saddled with the problem.

More likely, the cans of paints and poisons will just stack up in the cellar or workshop, with nowhere to go. Leaks and drips are bound to occur, and the substances aren't called hazardous waste without good cause. The chemicals constitute a hidden health problem.

Hence, there is no alternative to a well-run, well-funded chemical pick-up program. It works, and it saves countless headaches in the future. If we want a clean planet, we have to pay for it.

With luck those frustrated people who were stuck in line when the program was called off will remember this incident at the next Tewksbury Town Meeting. When the board of health begs for funds to hold a Hazardous Waste Collection Day, remember how the last one ended early, with the job left unfinished.

Funding the program completely, say $30,000 worth, would only be one tenth of one percent of the overall town budget.

But the problems caused by chemical dumping would be much, much more expensive to clean up.

You can't run a school without heat

by Larz F. Neilson

When Wilmington voters convene in a special town meeting on October 16, they will be asked to vote on two appropriations for additional work to the high school.

Number one on the list of work to be done is the installation of new boilers, or more accurately, a new heating system. Also desired, but with less support, is a renovation program for the high school auditorium.

The new boilers will cost $1.1 million. The price tag on the work in the auditorium is set at $400,000.

The first question that many people will ask is why this work was not done under the recent renovation of the school. With a total expenditure of some $9 million, it does seem surprising that something as basic as boiler replacement wasn't taken care of.

The boilers, it turns out, were examined not once but twice, once under the architectural studies for the renovation and a second time under an energy audit. Neither inspection seemed to pick up on the poor condition of the boilers.

That condition, though, is now evident, and the superintendent of public buildings is hoping that he can coax the boilers to last through the coming winter. The school has three boilers, two of which must be operational in order to run the school. If two boilers should break down, a truck-mounted boiler could be set up, but that would cause a temporary shutdown of the school and cost unknown thousands of dollars.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski has said that the town is seeking remedies against the parties responsible for the inspection work that evidently was not done adequately.

Lawyers are sometimes accused of producing a lot of hot air, but in this case, that will not heat the school. In order to heat the school, steam is needed. The school needs new boilers if it is to be heated, and not heating a building is simply foolish. Students cannot attend classes in an unheated building. Worse yet, failure to heat the building would risk the plumbing system, or at least require some valiant efforts on the part of the maintenance staff.

With need established, the other part of the discussion is cost. There will probably be some town meeting expert who will tell the voters that the work can be done for less. Maybe it can. But in order for the numbers to be real, you would have to actually find someone who will do the job for less.

The town showed in the special election in June that voters are reluctant to grant an override of Prop. 2 1/2 if the money is going for the annual school budget. But in the past, voters have approved an override when the money was going for a capital item, such as the renovation of the school.

The state's budgetary woes have placed economic burdens on the cities and towns of Massachusetts. There is no way that the heating system can be repaired without the override of Prop. 2 1/2.

Yes, the voters deserve some explanations as to how the entire mess developed. And yes, there will be some people who get quite mad about it. But the bottom line is that the boilers must be replaced, or else the town will find itself faced with an even more expensive proposition in the future. And this is in addition to the inconvenience and lost time that a boiler failure would impose on the students and teachers in the high school.

letters to the editor

Dear Mr. Cressman:

The Town of Tewksbury holds a Hazardous Waste Disposal Day, ostensibly to promote the disposal of such materials in a safe, responsible manner. Since there are few options open for those who wish to dispose of small amounts of materials, short of paying exorbitant fees for large containers/dumpsters, this is a much-needed service for those of us who accumulate small amounts of hazardous waste. Predictably, in these days of fiscal crisis, funds for such projects are limited. The current system of providing free disposal for those who come early on a first-come, first-served basis, is an inequitable and inefficient use of limited funds. Townspeople are putting their time and effort into collecting these materials, loading them into their vehicles, transporting them to the D.P.W. garage, and then transporting all this waste home, if they are unlucky enough to arrive after the first 90 minutes of Hazardous Waste Disposal "Day."

As a concerned citizen, I was one of those unlucky few to arrive after the cutoff. However, as a concerned citizen, I did offer to pay to have my materials disposed of -- only to be told that arrangements had not been made for such a request. They couldn't process the paper work, etc. I wondered why, since this was not the first time people have been turned away. This is also inefficient and ineffective in meeting the needs of the townspeople.

Since an increase in subsidized monies on the part of the Town or State is not likely, alternative plans should be made to: (A) maximize the use of available monies; and (B) promote responsible disposal of the wastes by all townspeople.

By supporting the free disposal of waste for a few, as opposed to structuring a system of copayment, or disposal for a fee, the needs of the many and the need for complete environmental protection are unmet.

I, for one, expect more thoughtful, efficient planning on the part of town officials.

Mary F. Krause

Dear Larz:

Just a short note to reply to Arlene Surprenant's sarcastic hit in the paper last week.

Mike McCoy, along with other officials, was not able to attend the "Gift Giving" of $110,000 by the Redevelopment Authority last week.

According to your writer I should have been there because I've been pushing to have the funds given back to the town. I wasn't invited, but why should I go to see Carl Backman call this $110,000 a gift?

This was money obtained when the Redevelopment Authority sold town land to developers.

Their function was to sell this land and the money belongs to the townspeople. This is like calling the Harnden Tavern a gift to the town, after it was bought with taxpayers dollars.

I felt the taxpayers should have received more of the Redevelopment Fund to help us during this shortfall.

You can now write another round of editorials telling us what a great job the Authority is doing.

Selectman Michael V. McCoy

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

As policymakers, it is the responsibility of the school committee members to adopt a course of action designed to influence decisions. The budget process allows the committee to determine acceptable limits to spending within departmental budgets. Within this process, the directors of the various departments are liable for the expenditures in that budget.

In her "one-seventh report" this week, Mrs. Paglia continued to look for excess funds in the athletic budget. This is unfair to both Mr. Gillis and to the children involved in the various activities that she has chosen to name.

The flag squad, of which my daughter is co-captain, does not in actuality figure into the athletic budget. The girls wear recycled uniforms, and the parents provide the boots, jerseys and jackets that complete their attire. When on rare occasions the flags and uniforms need replacement, then they become a budgetary item. This group, as part of the band, join band members in raising funds to defray the expense of band camp by delivering flyers each fall and spring for the Community Schools. The balance of the camp is paid for by the parents and students themselves. Where then, Mrs. Paglia, is the excess cost?

Mr. Gillis, as administrator of the athletic budget, deserves the same treatment as all department heads and directors. If the budget process was carefully executed, and there is no reason to believe that it was not, then either cut a percentage from every budget or let the issue alone. It is a very discouraging for the young adults who practice six hours a week and devote the entire day Saturday to their activity to see themselves singled out, when the "bottom line" does not even apply.

The best conclusion for taxpayers to make is that there is really no excess in the school department budget. The school committee acted reasonably and responsibly, and they deserve our support at town meeting on October 16!

Sincerely,
Peggy Kane

Wilmington fincom hearing had a few surprises

by Arlene Surprenant
There were a few surprises at Tuesday's public hearing to review the 13 articles on the October 16 special town meeting warrant. One article, to rezone the old Roberts Estate property to high density business, was withdrawn and another article, seeking to purchase or take land on Burlington Avenue for affordable housing, was passed over. Selectman Jim Stewart requested that the latter article be passed over because the land the town was interested in failed a percolation test.

Much of the discussion, however, centered on Article Seven. That article asks the town to appropriate a sum of money to remodel and make repairs to the high school auditorium. In order to pass, the article would require a 2/3 majority at the special town meeting and a simple majority in the November 4 special election.

Finance committee members said they were uncomfortable with only estimated figures for the work since they had suffered "some degree of embarrassment" with estimates in the past. Members raised the possibility of delaying action on the article until the annual town meeting to give the Permanent Building Committee more time to firm up the cost. "We don't have a problem with that," said PBC Chairman Diane

Dear Larz:

In response to "Looking a Gift Horse in the Mouth," published on Sept. 27, 1989:

I am sure that one of the reporters present was the wife of the vice chairman of the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) at that hastily called, special meeting.

I am also one of the few people, in recent years, to have attended several WHA meetings which are normally scheduled for the first Thursday of the month, but often postponed, the reason usually given to me is that there is difficulty getting a quorum to meet!

I have been under the impression, in recent years, that the one half million dollars was being saved to fund various consultant contracts! No sooner would one, one quarter-mile super highway be soundly defeated, than money would be found for another proposal to take its place. Sometimes some selectmen would agree and the others could not. Some wanted to build more ramps, or a wall in front of my house.

It would also help if the WHA would meet in their meeting room at the Town Hall, instead of using Chamber of Commerce space in upstairs back rooms of sandwich shops and doctor's offices or backrooms of former real estate offices, none of which is known to the average lay person!

All of this is just a warm up to my real reason for writing:

As President of Wilmington Community Television, Inc., I take umbrage at the question "where are the cameras." The editorialist is well aware of the way W.C.T.V. became a reality!!

She is well aware of the fact that the directors, thereof, are in fact, and are intended to be, a cross-section of public spirited citizens of the Town of Wilmington!

We have spent two years working on bylaws to form an independent non-profit corporation to access to Cable TV for any resident willing to use our studio and equipment. Access means just that; admittance or acceptance to, according to my dictionary. The cameras at the selectmen's meetings and school committee meetings are a part of our lease agreement with the town for the use of the Swain School gymnasium and office area.

Our lease reads in part: "The WCT and Wilmington agree that, in lieu of rent, WCT will tape and cablecast the following: 1) all regularly posted board of selectmen's and school committee meetings open to the public, 2) such public hearings and meetings requested by the town manager or the school superintendent appropriate to WCT's programming policies (consistent with the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution) and abilities and WCT will make its best efforts to comply with such requests of this section."

As time permits, and, provided more volunteers come forward, we shall be able to tape and cablecast meetings of other groups, such as the Sept. Chamber of Commerce meeting, videocasting of the Recycling Commission and the Fourth of July, some youth activities i.e. football games and soccer games.

I think we are all ill-served when pot shots are taken at a group that is moving toward and getting a positive response from the townspeople!

Yours truly
Charles N. Gilbert

Note: No "pot shots" at the WCTV were intended in last week's editorial. This writer feels the cable corporation is made up of dedicated individuals who provide a needed service in town.

When I asked where the cameras were, it was a tongue-in-cheek reference to the way certain individuals play to the cameras in judging the redevelopment authority and their financial practices.

Also, some of the WHA meetings are now being held in room 9 at Wilmington Town Hall. -- a.s.

Dear Larz:

The major television networks, as well as the Boston channels are devoting larger and more frequent segments of broadcast time to documenting the horrors of the "drug wars." Last week, CBS and ABC competed for our attention with dramatic sequences showing major drug busts; WCVB included a segment around local drug usage.

Big drug busts and family therapy confrontations are valid and newsworthy, but they don't tell the whole story. We see the camera pan down on the shackled hands of a young woman being led away by a police officer, and then up to the terrified face of her three-year-old son in the arms of another officer. Between that scene and the credits we may learn what happened to the mom and her confederates; rarely, if ever, do we learn what happened to the baby.

Statistics published by the Massachusetts Department of Social Services may contain that information; they show an increase in the number of custody cases of from six thousand to seventy-two hundred in the past year. That's one hundred new placements per month! The task of finding appropriate homes for these children is next to overwhelming; one reason is that people aren't generally aware of the recent changes in regulations around foster care. Single parents (of either sex) and working parents, as well, are eligible to become foster parents; there is sensitive screening by degreed social workers and a 10 week classroom information and training program.

Last Tuesday (9/19), WBZ's "People are Talking" presented an ideal model of contemporary foster parenting: a young, single foster mother of three who believes that love not only conquers all, but vastly improves one's self-image and satisfaction quotient. She has undiscovered counterparts in the community, often people who have long considered becoming foster parents, but just haven't taken the step. "Family Finders" will help them, at no charge, to clarify their direction; a phone call to (508) 620-0010 is all that is needed.

Very truly yours,
Mary O'Reilly Duclos

Local preference assured for new elderly units

The 32 unit for elderly housing, being constructed at the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) is now in the "finishing" stage. Most of the carpenter work is completed and painting of the building has begun. The work should be completed by the end of November.

The members of the WHA met Tuesday evening with Jean Moltenbray, from the (state) Executive Office of Elderly Affairs. It was an hour long meeting and the news was good.

The WHA has a local list of applicants which Danny Gillis described as "that long" and he held out his left arm to show. For some months the WHA has been understanding, from some source, that the state was taking over the assignment of units in new elderly housing, and that the local listings would not be used.

Gillis asked about the story Tuesday night. He was assured that the "local" list would be the one used, when the time came to assign the units.

Congregate Housing was the principal topic discussed by Moltenbray, that being a type of housing for people who have disabilities. The WHA will have accommodations for four persons, in Congregate Housing.

"We have been very successful in bringing people out of the nursing homes," the WHA members were told. "If a person needs supervision this is not the place. Short term memory loss is not, however, a cause for No Acceptance."

Congregate Housing is not for everyone. But it is far better than a nursing home. It is not an institution - each person pays rent.

There is home-like furnishings, with single beds for each person. Each person is allowed to have a TV and a telephone. There is a refrigerator for every two persons. Meals can be prepared by the home maker, or they may be coordinated.

The WHA will have the services of a coordinator, for the Congregate Housing, for a total of 10- hours a week. Payment of that person will be by the Executive Office of Community Development. (EOCD).

Because Warren Newhouse is no longer a member of the WHA, new officers were elected.

Kevin J. McMillan is still chairman. A. Daniel Gillis is vice chairman, Joan Sadowski is secretary, Elaine Hatchey is treasurer and Betty Keough is assistant treasurer.

GETTING FLOWERS IN SHAPE

Generally speaking, flowers can be arranged in six basic shapes. The simplest is the "line" arrangement which draws its inspiration from the Japanese style known as "ikebana." With the line arrangement, the first stem establishes a strong vertical central line. Upon this upright axis, other stems are added until a sparse symmetry is achieved. A more complex effect is achieved by the "line-mass" arrangement which also starts with a similar strong vertical line. The difference is that a few more stems are used without creating a top-heavy effect. More complex are the "circular" and "triangular" arrangements which employ much more mass of varying weights to achieve the desired shape. Lastly, "square" and "fan" arrangements achieve their silhouettes by the use of stems of equal length placed either parallel or at angles to one another. The purpose of this column is to answer many of the questions frequently asked about floral arrangements and landscaping. For further information on the best ways to arrange flowers while extending their life, you may call 851-4472. Insurance Strategies

by Kenneth A. Spinelli
Licensed Insurance Advisor-Broker

A GOOD READ

How many us buy adequate insurance, but do not actually read a policy until it is time to make a claim? The best time to read a policy is at the time it is purchased. By asking the insurance agent or broker for a copy before the actual policy arrives, one can study it calmly. It is a good idea to make notations in the margins if an aspect of the policy is not fully understood. The person who sold the policy can clarify these matters. In addition, a policy holder might want to pay attention to how he should go about making a claim. In the case of a life insurance policy, he may want to make sure he fully understands how to change beneficiaries. Leaving these matters unclarified only needlessly adds to a policyholder's anxiety should a claim crop up.

Take the time and have your policy fully explained to you. The time to know what your policy covers and what part you are responsible for is now before the need arises. In this way, changes can be made if necessary to assure that you are properly insured. Here at SPINELLI INSURANCE AGENCY, INC., we can assist you in procuring the property amount and type of insurance adequately protect you. You will find our office conveniently located at 90 Woburn St., Wilmington. To reach us, call (508) 658-5064. Office hours are from Mon.-Fri. 9-5.

HINT: Each insurance policy clearly defines the rights and responsibilities of both the insurer and the insured.

A one-seventh report from the Wilmington School Committee

by Andrea M. Paglia

The Wilmington Redevelopment Authority has generously given Wilmington a gift of $110,000+. I am grateful to the WRA for their support. Yet, I am embarrassed by my lack of support for them. I apologize for my apparent carelessness. My not attending the meeting was an error of misinterpretation regarding a meeting notice, no excuse, just a big shame on me. Please, realize I am cognizant of their effort to help the town.

The School Committee recently voted support for the upcoming bond issues for the new heating system at the high school and the Option B ($400,000) for the auditorium. Please be advised that this is a Public Buildings recommendation and not one of the school department. In other words, the monies are from the town side, if you will. The work is required to be completely at a school, but the resources are not from the school budget. The effect of not doing the job will keep the children out of school, cost big money for temporary service to use the school but the money will have to be spent one way or the other.

The Public Buildings department has researched long and hard to solve this dilemma and needs our support. The hidden ramifications of not acting on the issue will severely jeopardize the town not punish the school department for past performances - real or circumstantial.

The bond issue, itself, can cause confusion. A 10 year bond is merely a long term investment. The initial year is the hardest impact on taxes and diminishes until the final year. On the other hand, an override is a permanent impact on taxes. That is the major consideration between passage or not. I ask all to evaluate the situation with this in mind. Failure to pass is costly, more costly in the long run.

One seventh is a source of communication not offered before now. Its effectiveness is new ground, its growing pains expected. Is it working? Yes - even dissatisfaction is better than apathy. I welcome all opinions and try to address them in short order. To convince someone to speak out or get involved is positive. People are responding to communication. Thank you.

My goals are to see packed houses at Selectmen, School Committee, and Town Meetings as well as 80 to 90 percent turn out at elections. Triggering interest is an important commitment of mine. Voting is a privilege in this country while it makes martyrs in others. If this isn't a basic issue of education, I am way off base. However, it is part of Wilmington's philosophy for education to help our children be aware and prepared to live in our society. Education is a survival tool granted by the Constitution, a right as Americans. The glitch is you have to participate to maintain it.

Using the newspapers was a suggested vehicle of communication offered by the Mass. Association of School Committees. Appointing a member for a vacant seat, assessing the budget, creating new avenues for monies to maintain programs, being conscious of the total governmental process or having to take a stand are all part of the current issues in education. To isolate education from these issues is unrealistic in a democratic lifestyle. Unfortunately, monies, busing and like topics tend to dominate many issues across the state and nation. Do I like it? No. Could an average of 20 percent voter turn outs have anything to do with it? I think so.

Fundraisers and how many are allowed or what's the policy on gifts and donations are just a few of the questions being asked. Local funds minus mandates equals accountability. Yesteryear is gone, and reactionary decision making is here. All agendas on all boards are faced with financial overtures. The cry for consistent and reasonable management has never been as loud. Who's at fault is not resolve but reactionary and band aid policy. What's at fault, adjustments and longer range realistic goals are the productive challenges facing us today. How can we accomplish this task? Together, I hope, starting and the Town Meeting and the elections.

Tech seniors hear tips on small business

Seniors at Shawsheen Tech heard tips and procedures for starting a small business when two representatives from the Lowell Office of the Massachusetts Department of Revenue spoke to Social Studies classes last week.

Frank Botta and Ed Domoracki discussed business registration, tax filing responsibilities and types of businesses, including sole proprietorships, corporations and partnerships.

"They typically give this program for adults," said Paul Cecchini, Shawsheen guidance counselor who coordinated the sessions. "They now realize that vocationally trained students are potential small business owners, and we thought this would be valuable," he added.

Cecchini said Department of Revenue personnel have been coming to Shawsheen for five years, to speak with students about income taxes. Botta will be back in both January and February, first to address students and staff about state and federal income tax, then to assist students in the preparation of their tax forms.

Wilmington library has computers for public use

Computers are a great resource once you learn how to use them. And there are places offering courses, but that does you no good unless you have one.

Well, now you do have one, or to be totally accurate, two.

The Wilmington Memorial Library has installed two Apple II GS computers, thanks to a grant from the Mass. Board of Library Commissioners. The library is offering time on the computers and instruction in how to use them and some of the software, too.

Installed during the summer, there is a computer upstairs in the children's room, and another in the adult area downstairs. Thus far, patrons have logged more than 300 hours of use.

The library now has a well rounded collection of software which continues to grow. Some of the most recent additions are: Personal Newsletter, Computer Preparation for the SAT, That's My Story and Children's Writing and Publishing Center. A current list of available software programs can be found near the computer in the adult department of the library. All equipment and software has been purchased through a grant from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners. The computers are available for public use whenever the library is open and a library card is necessary for their use.

Orientations are continuing twice a month for those patrons unfamiliar with an Apple IIGS computer. The next scheduled orientations will be Monday evenings, Oct. 23 and Nov. 13 at 7:30 and Wednesday afternoons, Oct. 25 and Nov. 15 at 1:00. Space is limited and patrons should register in advance. Sandra Curtin, a Wilmington resident with many years of Apple experience, will lead the evening orientation sessions. The afternoon sessions will be led by Chris Dehoff, reference librarian. The orientations will be held on the main floor of the library.

The library has also scheduled time for assistance with two popular programs - AppleWorks and 816/Paint. Kathleen Huntley, a Wilmington resident, will be available for questions about AppleWorks, an integrated software program encompassing word processing, database management and spreadsheets. Ms. Huntley will be at the library on two Monday evenings in October - Oct. 16 and 23 at 7:30 to share her expertise with this program.

Jan Williams, another Wilmington volunteer, will be available to offer assistance with the art and creativity program 816/Paint. This software program makes use of the wide variety of artistic capabilities of the Apple IIGS. It is especially geared to high school age students and older. Ms. Williams will be available on Thursday evenings in October at 7:30. Both the AppleWorks and 816/Paint sessions will be held on the second floor of the library. Patrons should sign up for the above sessions, but walk-in attendees will be accepted if there is room.

"The continuation of these programs will depend on the interest of the public," said Ms. Dehoff, volunteer coordinator. "Subject matter may change as demand indicates and as volunteer skills are available. Patrons are encouraged to sign up at the earliest convenience."

Wilmington to hold free flu clinic Oct. 14

The Wilmington Board of Health will hold a free flu clinic at the Town Hall, 121 Glen Road on Saturday, October 14, from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Persons 65 years or over and persons of any age who have a chronic disease such as heart disease, high blood pressure, asthma, chronic lung disease, diabetes, kidney disease should avail themselves of this service.

Immunization is also recommended for persons who provide essential community services or who may be at increased risk of exposure such as medical care personnel and social protection groups. Any one allergic to eggs or egg products should not take this vaccine. Anyone with a temperature, cold, cough or recent sore throat should not take vaccine at this time.

This year, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health is providing the split flu vaccine which may be used for children under 13 years of age with chronic diseases. Pneumonia vaccine may not be available at this clinic but will be available at a later date, to be announced.

Anyone home bound may call the Board of Health for a home visit. A makeup clinic will follow.

Any questions may be directed to the Board of Health at 658-4298, ext. 314, Ann Fitzgerald, R.N.

League to present forum on groundwater

"Protection of Wilmington's Groundwater" will be the subject of the first League of Women Voters' Public Forum this year. The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, October 17, 1989 at 8:00 p.m. at the Wilmington Public Library.

The public is encouraged to attend the Forum to hear a panel of speakers discuss ways to protect groundwater from contamination. Panelists will include Donald Hickman, a toxic pollution specialist with Massachusetts Audubon Society who will discuss aquifer protection zoning; Martin Pillsbury, an environmental planner with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, who will review inter-community efforts to protect water supplies; and Robert Arnold, professor of cartography at Salem State College, who will show aerial photo slides of land uses along the Ipswich River. A representative from the Wilmington Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners has also been invited to discuss steps the board is taking to develop aquifer protection zoning for Wilmington.

With the increased concern, statewide and nationwide, about contamination of groundwater supplies, the need for the public to become more knowledgeable about protective measures is critical. This Public Forum sponsored by the Wilmington League of Women Voters is an attempt to provide up-to-date information so that people in Wilmington and surrounding communities can become better informed about local concerns and what can be done to protect our local groundwater supplies.

Woburn as he was investigated a one car accident on Nichols Street in which the driver fled the scene. The car had been reported stolen from Woburn a short time earlier.

Several people were arrested or placed under protective custody after a disturbance and fight at Bill and Bob's Restaurant early Sunday morning.

Shawn Howley of Gieger Drive, Tewksbury was charged with operating under the influence and having no license in his possession. A computer check revealed a warrant issued by state police in Newbury.

Tige Ryan of 315 Burlington Avenue was charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery on a police officer. Both men were bailed for Monday at Woburn Court. Three other people were placed under protective custody.

Sunday evening Officers White and Miller arrested David McNee of 2 Moore Street on the basis of a warrant of default from Woburn Court.

Three men were taken to area hospitals due to injuries sustained in a two car collision on the Nichols Street bridge at 1 a.m. Sunday. Charles Cushing, 21, of 47

Washington Avenue and a passenger, Therron Hamlin, 23, of 35 Grace Dr. were taken to St. John's Hospital by the fire department ambulance.

At the hospital Cushing was cited for operating under the influence, driving so as to endanger, failing to keep to the right and speeding. He will be summonsed to Woburn District Court on the above charges.

The driver of the other car, John W. King, 43 of Whipple Road, Tewksbury was taken to Winchester Hospital for treatment. Investigating officers are Paul Jepson and Bob Richeter.

At 3:30 a.m. Tuesday, Officer David Axelrod stopped Bruce F. Mellon of Billerica on Middlesex Avenue and arrested him after a computer check revealed a non-support warrant issued by Lowell police.

Correction: In last week's police log, a youth arrested on marijuana charges was listed as living at 3 Lee St., Wilmington. This address was incorrect.

Fair coming soon

The senior fair is but a week and a half away. All you wonderful seniors have been taking in excellent articles. It looks like we will have another successful fair this year. If you have been a busy bee at home but have not finished your articles yet, don't worry, the committee will accept them even if it is the day of the fair. If you do have them finished but cannot get them to the center, call and a member of the Fair committee will gladly go to your home and pick them up. Dog report

The Wilmington dog officer is presently holding the following dogs. Dogs picked up in Wilmington are kept at the Central Animal Hospital in Stoneham.

Female spayed shepherd mix, light brown with choke collar, picked up Oct. 2 on Boyle Street (off Dorchester Avenue)

Although the animal control officer does not take cats, there are at the present time some cats available for immediate adoption.

Dogs held for ten days are available for adoption. Due to limited budgets and space, it is difficult to keep dogs longer than the minimum ten days. Therefore adoptions are now more important than ever, to prevent dogs having to be euthanized.

The animal control officer will be at the Wilmington Pet Shop at Colonial Park Mall on Sat., Oct. 7 from 10 to 2 with strays (cats and dogs) up for adoption.

Dogs and cats picked up in other towns are also available for adoption at Central.

The animal control officer may be contacted by calling 658-7845. The number at Central is (617) 438-6404.

For dog complaints, contact the Wilmington Police Department on its business line, 658-5071.

popular stops during the Fair.

Estimate needed

The committee would like to have an estimate of those of us who will be eating at the Fair. If you would, will you tell the person at the desk as you arrive if you will be.

White elephant, yard sale

Make sure you start collecting all your household articles you no longer want and someone else may need for the yard sale and white elephant table. Don't take them to the center until Saturday, October 14. The yard sale will depend on the weather.

Whist party October 16

The first whist party of October will be held Monday, October 16 due to the holiday, Monday, October 9. The center will be closed and the minibus will not be on the road. Please make appointments accordingly.

Fuel assistance

The fuel assistance program will start this year on November 1 and end March 31. Those who received assistance last year will receive this year's applications in the mail. An instruction sheet will be included with the application. Read it and make any corrections that need to be made. Sign on the designated line and enclose a copy of your income checks and return it to the Community Teamwork, Inc. in Lowell.

Other seniors who did not apply last year but feel they may qualify this year should call the center 657-7595 for information. If you qualify you will be given the time and date of your appointment to have your application made out.

Flu and pneumonia shots

The Board of Health will be administering the flu and pneumonia shots this year at the town hall on Saturday, October 14, beginning at 10 a.m. The nurse will be coming to the center to give the shots to seniors. The flu shot is free and given every year. The pneumonia shot will cost $5.00. If you have had it before ask the nurse if it is necessary to have it again. Remember, let the nurse know if you have a cold or are taking any medication before you take these shots, or you may have a reaction from the shot.

Earnings review

Any time during the year if we work under the Social Security System, we can get a review of our earnings to be sure their actual earnings are in line with the estimate of earnings our employers gives to the Social Security Office. Earnings are classed as wages and net earnings from self employment. In 1989 beneficiaries under the age of 65 can earn up to $6,480, and beneficiaries between 65-69 can earn up to $8,800 before benefits are effected. Those over 70 can earn as much as they wish and still receive their monthly Social Security check with nothing taken from it.

These amounts do not apply to disabled persons or people on Supplementary Security Income (SSI). They would report all earnings promptly.

Money received from interest, pensions, rental property, sale of capital assets, workers compensation, unemployment benefits, or sick pay is not counted in money earned as stated above. Always check with the Social Security office as there may be some other types of income that may not be counted that are not mentioned here. The telephone number of the Lowell Social Security Office is 508-454-9151.

Boys, grades one and two Rockets vs Meteors

Goal scorers for the Rockets were Paul Casely, and for the Meteors were Martin DeAngelo. Great playing by Mike Malesyk, Robert Garrett, Joe Kane, and Ryan Oatis for the Rockets. Electric grapes vs Ghostbusters Goal scorers were Eric Banda for the Grapes. Terrific plays by Ricahrd Palizzolo, Jason Barrett and Jon Delaney for the Grapes. Doing a great job in the nets for the Ghostbusters was Paul DeGrenaro. Great defense by Jason Thresher and Joseph Burns for the Ghostbusters. David Silva, Jimmy Tabor and Christopher Rose also played super.

Flames vs Ninja Turtles

Scoring double for the Flames was Craig Irwin. Jeffrey Stokes and Andy Myers played splendidly on defense, while Keith Long made a nice contribution on offense for the Flames. The Flames had outstanding efforts by William Kent, Michael Halas and David Silva.

Sunspots vs Smurfs

Mike O'Connor drove two into the nets for the Sunspots, while Billy Konaxis tallied another score. Contributing super jobs also for the Sunspots were A.J. Mitzan, Eric Bromley, Eric Farrell and David Trucira. Scoring for the Smurfs was Danny Keating, while goalie Brian Constantine had a good day. Brian Mather and Patrick Sullivan did superb jobs for the Smurfs.

Girls grades one and two Peacocks vs Parakeets

Producing the goals for the Roses were Leann Bento and Melissa Mather. Having outstanding games for the Roses were Kristin Finerty, Melissa Nickerson, Leisa Park and Kim Landry.

Boys' under 10

Wilmington II remained undefeated with recent wins over Burlington (1-0), Billerica (3-0), and Reading (2-0). Wilmington's record is now 4-0 and have not allowed a goal to be scored against them.

Goal scorers during these three wins were Derek Mazza (two goals), Scott Swiezynski (two goals), and Danny Torpey and Mike Garbati with one goal each.

Darren Aciero and Sean Cahill continue to provide offensive pressure with their speed and agility.

Peter Bamberg and Ryan Covino have played outstanding in goal.

Coaches Chris Archiero and Barry Cahill have been pleased with the overall effort and team spirit demonstrated by all the players.

Boys' under 14-II

The boys made it three in a row, with their last victory against Reading with a 4-1 score.

Reading scored its' first and only goal early into the game, which made Wilmington come back strong. Denny King headed the ball to Eric Jones, who then headed it to Patrick Cahill, who scored the first goal. Danny, Eric and Patrick didn't let up, which kept the Reading goalie quite busy.

Dave Kenney and Glenn MacNeil had numerous shots on goal. These boys are true team players. Paul Heigham hustled the entire game, with no rest at all. He, along with the other fullbacks prevented Reading from scoring again. A super play was made by the fullback line, with Keith Audette heading the ball to Rob Bentley, who then headed the ball to Garrett Whitmore, who again headed the ball to Patrick Cahill. Rob, Keith and Garrett had so many terrific plays, it was hard to keep up with them.

Halfback Ryan Swasey kicked the ball all the way to the net, but unfortunately it was stopped by the goalie. It was an excellent attempt. Goalie Stephen Smith was right on target with his speed and skill. Nothing was able to get past him. In the second half Kevin O'Leary took over as goalie and showed his ability to play many positions well.

Newcomer Darren Bishop scored the winning goal, with an assist by Erik Shafer. Their true capabilities showed through.

Goal number three came shortly after from Erik Shaffer, with an assist from Steven Smith. Doug Olender later scored with an assist from Tim Allard to put the finishing touches on the game, making it 4-1. Both Doug and Tim kept up their team playing until the goal was made. A great game by everyone.

Bring on the Lions

Bring on the undefeated Chelmsford Lions. The Wilmington High School football team matched it's victory total over the past two seasons with a defense-dominated 7-6 victory over Haverhill Saturday at Alumni Field.

Haverhill came into the game at 2-0-0, but the Wilmington defense led by Frank Cenca, Scott Tuxbury, Greg Catanzano and Brett Hicks shutdown the Hillies and their standout running back Greg Turner.

The Wilmington touchdown came late in the first half on a one yard run by quarterback Dennis Walsh.

Haverhill charged back with a score of it's own with seconds left in the first half before the remainder of the game turned into a defensive struggle dominated by the Wildcats.

A year ago the Wildcats gave the Lions all they could handle thanks to a gritty and gambling defense. Expect more of the same at Chelmsford Friday night beginning at 7:30.

Field dedication

The Shawsheen Tech Rams will play their annual Homecoming football game on special turf when they meet Tyngsboro on Saturday, October 7.

At 1:30 p.m., just before kickoff, the football field will be dedicated as Cassidy Field, in honor of Samuel J. Cassidy, a lifelong and well known resident of Woburn who died in May.

A' squad crushes Methuen

A team rolls along A team (4-0)

Wilmington's Pop Warner A team put together another outstanding performance Sunday during a stunning upset of preseason favorite and defending champ Methuen, 22-0.

Once again the fine line play of Jim Angiolillo, Joe Lyman, Ryan McNee, Rick Blizzard, Rich DeLucia and Jeff Morin completely controlled the game. The outstanding speed and athletic ability of the Wildcat backfield was just too much for Methuen to handle.

Fine defensive performances were also turned in by Scott McKenzie, Randy Johnson, Richie Muse, Buddy Pratt, Jason Grady and Keith Pearlstein. The A team will travel to Marlboro Sunday for a 2 p.m. game.

B team (1-2-1)

Wilmington's B team again took a tough loss (12-6) to Methuen despite tough defense and good offense.

Once again the Wildcat offense moved the ball consistently up and down the field but couldn't seem to find the right play or the goal line when they needed to. Good offensive games were turned in by Jeff Senarian, Bill Coffill, Joan Florence, Jason Gardner, Derek Santini, Chris Carter and Mike Gilbert. Danny Lutz scored the lone Wilmington TD on a 16 yard run.

Defensively, the young Wildcats were all over the field with fine performances turned in by Brian Tildsley, Josh Levesque, Steve O'Neil, Sean Ballou, Dave Maglio, Phil Ritucci and David Sullivan.

The B's will be back in action Sunday at 12:30 in Marlboro, and look for a revived and hungry group of athletes.

C team (1-3)

Wilmington's C team Wildcats played a strong first half of football against a fine Methuen team, but ran out of gas in the second half and went down in defeat, 13-0.

Implementing a new look defense, the Wildcats gave Methuen fits early on with defensive standouts Jeff Farese, Kevin Tildsley, Wayne Francis, Adam Mazza, Richie Gillis, Robbie Parker, Steve Ritucci and David Guadreau, causing mass confusion in the usually potent Methuen attack.

Offensively, Wilmington could not seem to find the goalline despite some pretty good efforts from Billy Holloway, Sean Kerrigan, Lee Trimachi, Adam Grady, Dave Bennett, Tom Perrault, Jason Giangregorio, Steve Johnson and Tom McNamara.

Look for a new look on offense from the C's this week, to take advantage of some individual strengths, which will produce some points on the board and a W in the win column for the C team Wildcats.

The C's will be in action Sunday, 11 a.m. in Marlboro.

D team (4-0)

The Wildcat D team made it four straight shutouts and ran their record to 4-0 with a 20-0 win over Dracut.

The offense, with long sustained drives all game long, was led by running backs Jamie Campbell (one TD), Dennis Torpey (one TD) and Bill Harrison (one TD); while extra points were scored by Tim Gillis and Phil Bates.

Excellent runs were also made by John Plunkett, Eric Clancy and Dave Santini. The offensive line, providing some great blocking, was led by Chris DiLucia, John Briand, Shane Warford, Jim Cryst, Pat O'Toole and Mike Berien.

The defense, which had another outstanding day, was led by Pat Carter, Rory Ballou, Matt Garrett, Tom Baratta, Harrison, Campbell and Gates.

The D team will be back in action Sunday, 9:15 in Marlboro.

Pop Warner would like to thank everyone who participated in the adult dance last Friday evening. It was a relative success, but more importantly it was a fun evening for all those in attendance.

Everyone is reminded of the Pop Warner Las Vegas Nite, Friday, October 6 at the Sons of Italy Hall, 7 p.m. to midnight.

Joc talk

Dear Jock:

I am a 17-year-old, six foot two inch, 212 pound junior in high school and I play football. My father and my uncle played college football. My father wants me to get bigger; my uncle says I should get quicker, not bigger. Can I get quicker and bigger?

Chuck

Dear Chuck:

At 6'2" and 212 pounds, you already have good size. Your future playing weight should be determined by your height, and by the structure of your bones that must support the muscle, which constitutes most of your body weight.

Most coaches will advise a boy your size to continue to lift, which, if you do, will cause you to gain size and weight. I advise you to develop size and quickness at the same time. As you lift for bulk in the major muscle group, try lifting lighter weights with more repetitions to develop quickness. Every day except game days, do twenty 40 yard sprints and agility exercise for lateral quickness. (If your coach doesn't have such drills, write back.)

It is always best to lift or work out with a teammate, rather than alone. Time each other's sprints and keep track of the progress. If you gain weight, but start to slow down, stop the heavy lifting and work solely on your quickness with lighter weights and sprints.

A big, heavy lineman in high school, and especially in college, who has neither quickness nor agility, isn't worth his weight in used ankle tape. Not only can he not pursue as a defensive lineman, as a blocker he can not get out of the way of the back coming through the hole. Size without quickness is like a wide receiver with great speed and stone fingers.

Size along with quickness will allow you to perform at your peak. Without the two together, you limit your present performance and your future potential.

Cool, colder, too cold

by Bill Conlon
The leaves are changing, the air is growing colder by the day, and fall is certainly at hand.

Officially, autumn began with the autumnal equinox in September, at the exact moment when the day and night were equal length. Days have been growing steadily shorter since the summer solstice in June, and the shortest day of the year will arrive just before Christmas. Then we begin the upswing again, but the cold will be here to visit first.

However, now is the time to grow your winter fur, so to speak. A few easy steps taken now will insure a measure of comfort when the ice is thick on the windshield, and on the pond. Your actions now are vital to your winter enjoyment.

The biggest mistake people make at this time of year is to dress up in heavy clothes, to beat the fall chill. Heavy jackets and even coats are being seen, and those unfortunates will be hurtin' squirrels once the winter is here with a vengeance.

A good friend of mine, from Fort Lauderdale, once donned an Arctic parka to beat the chill of a nippy September day, and I felt sorry for her. I knew she'd be a prisoner in her own home once winter began in earnest.

While she stood shivering in her best parka, her fiancée and I wore sweatshirts to work on her car. Jim was a Michigan native and he knew how to live with cold. We were a bit cool, but comfortable.

Sure enough, by mid-December Tracy's parka wasn't heavy enough to keep her comfortable, and she spent all winter looking through the window and cussing at the snow.

Too bad. But I've seen the same mistake made in New Englanders, by people who should know better.

A smart tactic to use in autumn is to wear nothing heavier than a good sweater, until the snow flies. If you can be both cool and comfortable at the same time, especially now, then your body will adapt to the outside temperature.

In no time at all, it won't seem so cold. Strange but true. The thermometer won't lie; but your body will -- in the right way. If you start conditioning yourself right now, winter will offer more enjoyment than you might imagine.

My wife, who is always cold due to her poor circulation, has given up asking me what it's like outside. If the temperature is above zero, it's not bad, and if it's above 32 degrees, it must be spring! Drives her nuts.

And I'm here to testify that cold does not -- repeat does not -- give you a cold. If you catch a cold, it came from a virus you picked up.

and not the temperature as so many people wrongly believe. A case of the sniffles is different, as your nose will ooze fluids to protect the lining of your nasal passages from cold air. The sniffles will stop after you warm back up.

But I'm not immune to the cold. Nobody is. Two deer seasons ago I danced with hypothermia and lost, but I lived. It wasn't any fun.

Hypothermia is the cooling of the body's core temperature, and it can be fatal. Shivering is the first and most easily recognized symptom. If you shiver, take it as a warning.

Later symptoms of hypothermia are slurring of speech, a feeling of warmth (!) and sleepiness. If you begin to feel warm, it means your body temperature is falling. Death isn't far away, and falling asleep is the final symptom. Sounds like a nice way to go, but no thanks.

In my case, I was sitting under a tree in a heavy snowstorm, waiting for the deer to walk by. None did. After a bit I began to shiver, and instead of getting up and hiking a few dozen yards to warm back up, I fought it. The shivering continued, but I didn't get the message.

It felt like I was moving in slow motion, but when I finally got back to the camp it took days for me to warm up, and I was tired the whole time. My hunting vacation was flat ruined. And by lowering my body temperature so much, my immune system defense was impaired, and I caught a brutal cold. Awful.

Still, I was lucky that day. I could have easily fallen asleep under that tree, and there I'd remain until the spring thaw.

For the most part, however, a bit of conditioning now will go a long way towards a fun winter. Get used to the chill in October, and it won't seem so bad in February.

But don't laugh at the shivers.

--- Tackle Box ---

Massachusetts bear hunters took 23 during the first section of the black bear hunt this year, with the biggest a 250 pound bruin taken in Conway in the Berkshires. Phase two of the Massachusetts black bear season will run from November 20 to 25, and permits are required.

The fall trout stocking will not be as big as previous years, with only 21,000 fish being planted in waters around the state. Another 30,000 rainbows that were being planned for the fall stocking will instead be held until spring, when they should weigh a pound apiece. Problems at the hatchery in Belchertown, from a warming of the Swift River water supply to predation by Great Blue Herons, are the main cause of the conservative fall stocking. Next fall should be back to normal, though.

Speaking of stocking, the state is planning to release a few thousand landlocked salmon "parr" during the fall stocking program. Tributaries of the Littleville Reservoir in Huntington will get some, the Wachusett Reservoir will get a few thousand, and 5,000 have been sent to Pennsylvania as a "thank you" for earlier help. The state will also release some 8,400 pike and 1,900 muskie into various ponds, and the fish are expected to reach the 28" minimum in two years.

battle

The Tewksbury Redmen (center photo) and the Wilmington Wildcats are currently locked in a battle for soccer supremacy in the Small School Division of the MVC. (Christine Tighe and Rick Cooke photos).

Bentley College soccer

The Bentley College soccer team, under the direction of third year head coach Peter Simonini, has opened the 1989 season with four consecutive wins, the best start for the team since the 1984 team won its first five.

This year's roster includes Jim Simas, sophomore forward from Tewksbury.

With the quick start, which includes wins over Bridgeport (a preseason Division II top 10 team), Bentley opened the 1989 season with four consecutive wins, the best start for the team since the 1984 team won its first five.

Simonini's club, which allowed just two goals in the four games, has averaged 2.8 goals a game thus far this season, more than doubling last year's norm (24 in 18 games, an average of 1.33).

Dating back to last season, Bentley has now won six straight (matching the school record) and eight of its last nine contests. It's quite a turnaround for a team that was just 7-21-3 during Simonini's first 31 games at the home.

There's a lot going on...

Action at Plimoth Plantation

It is during the autumn harvest season that one's thoughts often turn to New England, its first permanent European settlers, the Pilgrims and our modern holiday of Thanksgiving.

This year, Plimoth Plantation, the living museum of 17th-century Plymouth, will highlight its harvest season with the visit of Dutch emissaries from New Amsterdam, in a special 3-day event Oct. 7-9.

In October of 1627, a small group of Dutch dignitaries from New Amsterdam (on Manhattan Island) journeyed to Plymouth Colony to exchange gifts and discuss trade and alliance with the colony's leaders. Each year, the interpretation staff of Plimoth Plantation re-creates this historic meeting as a part of its renowned living history program.

The arrival of the Dutch delegation is the cause of great excitement which is evident throughout the village. Some of the Plymouth Colonists, have lived in Holland and are eager to grant their Dutch guests a generous portion of hearty English hospitality. The feasting tables are well laden with the bounty of the Colony's recent harvest. The militia, under the watchful eye of Captain Standish, will give demonstrations of their military preparedness seeking to make an appropriate impression on their Dutch guests.

As always, visitors to Plimoth Plantation are encouraged to totally immerse themselves in the culture of another time and place; to query and converse with the various dignitaries, join in a country song and participate in various period sports.

Later in the day, museum guests are invited to sample 17th-century cuisine as Plimoth

Plantation offers a feast from the past in the modern comfort of the Plantation's Accomack Room. Diners may choose from an intriguing assortment of period "receipts" as hosts from the time transport you back 300 years for an evening of dining and entertainment. Dinners will be served Oct. 6-8 beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Properly attired Victorian hosts will take you back to experience a holiday feast of the time. The customary feasting favorites will all be included: roasted turkey with cornbread stuffing, cranberry sauce, yams, creamed onions and pumpkin pie. While diners enjoy this sumptuous repast, period entertainers will offer a selection of grand Victorian Era music—truly a delightful and "traditional" way to spend a Thanksgiving holiday.

ROVING

Just a thought: Wouldn't it be wonderful if...

--You could turn back the hands of time and watch Yaz, Tony C., Mike Andrews, Jim Lonborg and Rico Petrucci play together one more time?

--You could open your mouth and sing as magnificently as Jane Oliver?

--The magic of the 1970 Boston Bruins could return?

--You really could wiggle your nose and produce magic, ala Samantha Stevens?

--Your grass could stay as green as it is right now?

--The people who say they are your best friends really were?

--Every writer could be as enjoyable to read as Margaret Truman?

--The "Massachusetts Miracle" really existed?

--You never had to wait in a supermarket or bank line again?

--You could spend just one hour talking intimately with your favorite artist?

--Everyone could have the sense of humor David Letterman has?

--Your parents never had to grow old?

--Every actress could be as charming to watch as Meg Ryan?

--The Rolling Stones and the Beatles could be around forever?

--President Bush's plan to end the drug war really worked?

--Nobody ever littered along the sides of Rte. 128?

--Donald Trump showed up at your front door because he had a flat tire outside your house?

As diners sample the various period dishes, hosts from the time acquaint them with the table manners and customs of the period. Dinners will be served on November 21, 22, 24, and 25 in the contemporary comfort of the Plantation's Visitor Center. All seatings begin at 6:30 p.m. Reservations are required for all dinners and can be made by calling Plimoth Plantation at (508) 746-3440.

The Old Village School

The Village School is empty now
It's shabby and forlorn
The grass is long around its frame
And the children all have gone.

It seems to miss their prattle,
Their glee when school was done,
Lessons all forgotten
When dismissal bell was rung

Many scholars have been dismissed
By the bell in the Old Village School,
No more to sit at their little desks
To learn the Golden Rule

The Old Swimming Hole is standing, too,
'Neath the shelter of the trees
Unruffled and still except perhaps
By the touch of a Summer's breeze

But each night when the world is sleeping
And the stars appear in view,
The children come back to the Schoolhouse
And file in two by two

Johnnie and Mary and Tommie,
All are assembled there,
The Schoolmaster looks over his specs
Lolling back in his swivel chair

The splash that is heard in the water,
Which always took place after school,
Is the children again running pell mell
Right into the Old Swimming Pool

The World goes on with its dreaming
And hears not the Old School Bell
And the stars in their all night virgil
Will never, never tell

The Village School is empty now,
It's shabby and forlorn,
The grass is long around its frame
And the children all have gone.

About the towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

MIDDLESEX EAST, PREPARE YOURSELF ... MOOSE SIGHTINGS IN AREA - This week's guest columnist has such an astounding tale to tell (and wag) that it is imperative he have the floor (and neighboring grounds) to himself.

He has emerged once again, after three consecutive moose sightings in the village of Reading East - on Haverhill St. "playing havoc with traffic," and at the home of David and Florence Richards whose son is the Reading police officer who had tried to locate the two moose seen the morning before on Johanna Drive. Last year's moose favored Reading West.

Environmental Police are on the case, and Reading Police Lt. Robert Silva has a list of moose do's and moostly don't's.

Bill Moose himself, in a letter to the editor of the Reading edition of the Daily Times Chronicle, explains exactly where he's coming from:

"The missus and I wanted to get a quick note off to the local newspaper. With all the hoopla these past few days, Clara thought maybe we should just go and introduce ourselves, since folks are all sorts of nervous, and give you an explanation as to why we've been looking around in your fine little town.

"We've wandered into Reading from the north; we had looked around in the Tewksbury area, but really needed to find something a bit closer to Boston. Reading's proximity to Route 93 and Route 1 make it a better choice, although we have yet to see what's inside the Route 128 belt.

"A misconception needs to be cleared up: one moose is a moose. More than one moose are a meese.

"We just don't know why people keep calling the police when we come through the neighborhood. We haven't met a police officer yet who had the time to go for coffee; they always have other calls to respond to after they finish seeing us. Besides, it's generally against department regulations to carry civilians in a non-emergency situation, and I have a devil of a time getting my rack in through those narrow cruiser doors.

"Please be assured that we don't peek in bedroom windows (you're not our type), won't steal your car (there isn't enough leg room in most models these days), and while cats and dogs are probably domesticated cousins of former neighbors, you must not worry that we'd hurt your pets.

"Your community is quite lovely. We are intrigued by the new properties being built off Salem Street, Greenhouse Acres you have called it. We're having trouble getting a builder to redraw plans to show increased ceiling height. Well, we'll certainly keep you all posted. After all, we'll want a subscription to the Chronicle, Scout cookies and a visit from the Welcome Wagon Lady.

"With very best regards to one and all, Bill Moose."

B-ill M-oose. B-ruce M-orang? Or one stranger, of a different ilk? Moost coincidental, we thinks ... oh, deer.

New wooden collectible dolls

While other Alaskan men were out hunting, trapping or tanning reindeer hides last winter, Harald Naber was tucked away in a cabin in the woods carving dolls.

While such a pursuit might seem a little out of the ordinary in the rugged north country, for Naber, a 50 year old resident of Homer, Alaska, it's second nature.

Last winter wasn't Naber's first effort at doll-making. For the past 18 years he and his wife Bette Jo, along with several employees have been making "tons and tons" of Alaskan dolls for the tourist market in Alaska.

Recently, Naber and his wife expanded the business to Florida by opening a second doll factory on U.S. Highway 19 in Homosassa. There they sell Naber's latest creation, the "Naber Kid" dolls with their big eyes and colorful clothes.

How did Naber, a native of West Germany and a pilot, end up making dolls in Alaska? "All of my pilot friends kept talking about the great frontier in Alaska. I was single. I had the time so I decided to go to Alaska and see if the stories were true and indeed they were," he explained. After living in Alaska for a while, he opened five stores, where he sold fur products. He had to travel all over the world to purchase the furs. Naber said he got the "inspiration" for carving dolls when he was looking for furs in Finland.

"The doll that caught my eye was carved from a wooden branch and wrapped in reindeer pelts," he said. "Pelts were plentiful in Alaska, so I thought it would be the perfect thing for the Eskimos to do."

"I carved 'Big Nuni,' my first doll, and showed it to the Eskimos, but they weren't really interested. With helpers few and far between, money scarce and the doll market limited, I knew it wouldn't be easy starting out, but I was determined."

After five years of making seven different "Nuni" dolls, Naber decided to sell the factory and enter another phase of doll-making. Within the next five years, Naber and his wife opened another doll factory, where he is still manufacturing Alaskan dolls. "There was a great demand for soft, beautiful Alaskan dolls in the Alaskan tourist market, so that's what we decided to make," said Naber.

Then after years of making many different Alaskan dolls, Naber decided to try his knack at carving again. "I wasn't sure what type of doll I was going to carve. All I knew is that I didn't want to carve just any old doll," he said. What he came up with is a doll that is "something that's sad when you're sad and happy when you're happy," he said. "I don't want a doll that just sits there and receives, but a doll that gives something in return."

After Naber finished carving Max, his first "Naber Kid," he carved two more, Molli and Jake. "I knew the dolls would do well in the doll market, so I decided to start making them at the same factory where we manufacture the Eskimo dolls," he said.

However, it wasn't that easy. Naber ran into problems when the wood he was to make the dolls out of began splitting and the color molds weren't working out.

Naber and his wife solved the wood problem by making the dolls out of a urethane material that looks like wood and has the same texture.

Naber's employees pour each of the molds for the head and limbs by hand, form the torso from a silicon rubber and make the woven hair from hemp. The clothing, designed by Mrs. Naber is made from material scraps from the local fabric store.

Mr. Naber carves the original part (head, body, arms and legs) from redwood or yellow cedar. Then a latex rubber impression is made of the original parts. After the rubber is cured a plaster-cast is made on which Mr. Naber performs and inscribes all the details for the final production mold which is made of silicone rubber.

What about "molded wood"? The material that is used to cast the heads, arms and legs of the dolls is very unique in the doll-making trade. Wood chips are used, mixed with a fossil-fuel (crude oil) derivative also known as the A-side of a high density urethane foam that is blended in the laboratory with a pigmented resin. During the curing process pressure is applied (2 tons and more) to the mold to assure the proper proportions and density. Doll heads and other parts made

"NABER KID," new collectible dolls.

Plant now for headstart on spring

Fall is the perfect time to plant trees and shrubs - for both plant and people. The cool temperatures create the best atmosphere for gardens and gardeners alike. Soil conditions are best and the earth is easy to work, since it's not dry and dusty as in summer and muddy as in spring. Roots of newly-planted trees and shrubs start to establish themselves before the ground freezes and make better growth without competition from the leaves of the plant as in spring and summer. When set in the ground in the fall, plants do better because they have two cool seasons, fall and spring, to get established before the heat and drought of summer.

Autumn is the best time to seed or reseed a lawn, since grass seeds and sprouts do best in the warm days and cool nights of the fall. Summer heat and drought make it very difficult to keep the seed beds moist enough to ensure sprouting and continued growth.

The nursery and landscape professionals who are members of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association can help you plant hardy trees and shrubs, fresher because they are Massachusetts grown. They can tell you which trees and shrubs to plant this fall and provide MNA products developed especially for use on trees and shrubs in Massachusetts, such as Plant-O-Ganic fertilizer.

They can also advise you on plants that do well with less water in these times of water shortages. Remember, save water by planting in the fall when less is lost to evaporation. Also, adopt watering practices that conserve water. Adjust your sprinklers to water your plants only - not the sidewalk, the driveway or the street. If the water flows off the grass into the gutter, split the watering times into two blocks to allow the soil time to absorb the water.

For most areas, deep watering once a week is enough. Use an empty can to measure the amount of water used. Ask your local MNA nurseryman or landscape professional for the recommended amount in your area. If you find that you can water a great deal less than you are currently, make the cutbacks gradually to allow the root system to adjust.

About six percent of all American households now have computers.

Why meeting the right people is so important to a newborn baby.

If you're pregnant or planning to be soon, you've got some important decisions to make. We can help you with one of the biggest: where you want to have your baby.

One thing to think about is the hospital staff. They should be warm and friendly, and be trained in the latest technology. Since every birth is a little different, they should be willing to accommodate your individual needs. And they should share the attitude that you and your baby deserve the best care it's possible to give. In short, they should be just like the staff at Great Beginnings.

So find out about Great Beginnings, the maternity center at Malden Hospital, by calling 397-6551. We make choosing the hospital the easy part.

MOVIE REVIEWS *Rockelle Flynn*In Country
Short Takes

"In Country" Starring Bruce Willis, Emily Lloyd, Joan Allen. Directed by Norman Jewison. Screenplay by Frank Pierson and Cynthia Cidre. Produced by Jewison and Richard Roth. Based on the novel by Bobbie Ann Mason. Rated R.

This movie really wants to be the definitive movie about Vietnam vets. Or, the definitive healing movie about Vietnam vets. The one where we can see how it's been for them, and how we all have to cope with the strange after effects of an undeclared and unpopular war. As much as director Norman Jewison strains for "In Country" to be all that, it isn't. It looks it, it sounds it, but it just doesn't feel it.

Part of the problem is that the pacing is off. Jewison concentrates on scenes in which there is no real dramatic build-up, leaving behind a few letters, some medals and Sam.

Lloyd, a British actress, does a mean Kentucky drawl. She does a fine job of parlaying all those tempestuous teen emotions, from perky to confused to arrogant. Unfortunately, her vitality is out-of-balance in a film which comes on very soft. She's gearing up toward a climax that never really materializes.

Willis dismissed his tough-guy TV persona to reveal a sensitive actor, relying on subtlety and a heart-wrenching gaze that is nothing short of hopeless. The acting is consistently top-drawer throughout the film. While the backbone of the story is weak, the supporting actors aren't. Allen, who at first comes across as shallow and self-centered, slowly sheds her pretty outer skin to told her. Why would she? She wasn't there.

When Sam finally does get there, to that point of understanding, it just isn't convincing. As she reads her daddy's letters and his diary, Jewison flashes back to the war, showing us how he died. But he barely skims the awfulness of the war. The atrocities are hardly discussed, yet Sam supposedly has her eyes opened by a journal that reveals almost nothing.

We assume a healing has begun both in Sam and Emmett when they take her grandmother to Washington to find her daddy's name on the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial. It's a moving scene, but mostly because of the power of that inky wall and not due to anything experienced by the characters. If only the film had showed us more, dealt more directly with the war instead of just talking about it, the intensity of the ending would have felt less forced.

SHORT TAKES

Cookie is a frothy comedy with all the twists, turns and contrivances of a 1930's farce. Emily Lloyd and Peter Falk are deliciously entertaining as a father/daughter mafioso team out to beat both the feds and fellow crooks at their own game. Don't think about it, just go along for the ride - it's a lot of fun. Rated R. ***

Welcome Home is another in a seemingly endless list of Vietnam War stories, only this one would have played out much better as a TV movie-of-the-week. Kris Kristofferson plays a Vietnam vet everyone thought long dead. When he emerges after 17 years in the jungle, he wreaks havoc on the emotional well-being of a wife and son who have gone on with their lives. Little more than a soap opera, it does little to shed light upon the plight of the MIA's still rumored to be alive in Southeast Asia. In fact, this could have been about anyone, not necessarily a Vietnam vet. Rated R. **

Shirley Valentine is a Cinderella story for the Eighties, only the fairy tale princess is a British housewife who leaves her boring life for her own satisfaction - and not for a plastic prince who has a way with the ladies. Pauline Collins is enormously appealing as the rebel in search of a cause, or at least a little meaning in her life. While some of the maxims she slings toward the camera are a bit much, there's no denying the lingering exuberance from both this film and her performance. Rate R.  1/2

The Package is a convoluted spy thriller that makes almost no sense, but is diverting enough to not be a total waste of money, thanks in great part to Gene Hackman. Even though there are so many plot flaws you could never believe the action on the screen, you believe Hackman, who plays an army career man who was set up at a patsy in an assassination plot. Will probably play better on video. Rate R. **

The Little Thief is a charming little French flick based on a script treatment by the late director Francois Truffaut. Charlotte Gainsbourg stars as a troubled 16-year-old trying to fumble through life just after WWII. While it hits many warm, humorous notes, Claude Miller's direction is sometimes too literal, leaving us with an ending that seems almost simple-minded. Rated R.  1/2

A Dry White Season tells the ugly tale of apartheid through the eyes of Donald Sutherland, a schoolteacher who slowly awakens from his social coma to try and combat the injustice around him. Marlon Brando as a cynical barrister and South African actor Zakes Mokae enhance this story, but one can't help but feel that it's time for an anti-apartheid movie told through a black perspective. Rate R. ***

True Love is a coarser, more realistic version of "Moonstruck" that hits just the right chords in the Great American Courting Ritual. Set in the Bronx, it takes a cold, hard look at young love as a couple plan, and fight, their way to the altar. Gritty, searingly honest and not as hopeful as Hollywood would like us to believe our romances to be. Rated R. ***

RECONDITIONING PROPERTIES IS SEMINAR TOPIC

On Wednesday, October 11 the Builders Association of Greater Boston (BAGB), in cooperation with BAGB's Commercial Builders Council, will present a seminar on how to make good, but worn, commercial properties more profitable. "Reconditioning Commercial Properties" will discuss the revitalization of commercial space through adaptive reuse or substantial renovation. This type of activity would be very appropriate for those interested in diversifying into commercial development.

The basic premise of the seminar is there are good properties in good locations that can be put to better use and generate more income through redesign and rehabilitation. The panelists for this program are experienced in identifying and (re) developing existing properties with potential, and then aggressively marketing the "reincarnated" space.

The panel includes Chuck Riley, VP for the Commercial/Industrial/Retail Division of Braintree based The Flatley Company, a major force in commercial development internationally; Greg Salvatore, a partner in Dedham based Robeck Company, a family owned management and development firm; and Ferris Strawbridge, a principal of Sasaki Associates, an internationally recognized planning and design firm.

The seminar will be presented from 2 to 5 p.m. (1:30 p.m. check-in) in the BAGB conference facility located in the Crown Colony Office Park, Quincy. The cost is $40 for BAGB members, $50 for non-members and includes a reception from 5 to 6 p.m. Reservations are necessary.

For more details and a program brochure, call (617) 773-1300.

School notes

by phyllis nissen

---Lack of money due to budget constraints: some Wilmington kindergarten and first grade students are walking to school this year despite previous assurances to the contrary. Buses in service are "packed" with an average of 65 youngsters on each - capacity is 78. Very long runs and late arrivals have some youngsters arriving home after 4:00 p.m.

The Wilmington School Committee is open to suggestions from residents who could be forced to choose between transportation and increased class size. In some cases, kindergarten and first grade students are walking to school with older siblings.

A safety committee and a chain of command to handle bus complaints have been established - should a transportation problem arise, parents will contact their children's principal, who will contact bus-route-scheduler and athletic director Jim Gillis, who will contact the safety committee, which will get in touch with the school board.

An additional bus would cost $25,000.

---Lack of money due to budget constraints: fewer school buses are on Stoneham's streets this year - buses for kindergarten children have been eliminated and middle schoolers must live at least two miles from the school to qualify for bus service.

School lunches in Stoneham have been increased to $1.25 in the middle and high schools, and $1.00 in elementary schools. The elementary and middle school academically gifted programs are gone - as well as several staff members.

The overriding issues? Budget cuts of $800,000.

---Lack of money due to budget constraints: the Reading School Committee has voted a bus user's fee of $25, maximum $50 per family, to be assessed to families of students whose transportation to and from school is not required by the state - with fee waivers granted in cases of financial hardship.

The Committee has also instituted an athletic participation fee of $30, maximum of $60 per family, for participation on interscholastic athletic teams - with waivers in cases of financial hardship.

---Lack of money due to budget constraints: Woburn is dealing with the high cost of busing by establishing a transportation package in which buses will be eliminated in exchange for sidewalk and fencing work and the hiring of additional crossing guards.

Last year's subcommittee on transportation proposed: the construction of fences and sidewalks; painting new crosswalks; hiring more, better-trained crossing guards and outfitting them in uniforms; and the busing of kindergarten children at noon - driving the morning kids home and the afternoon kids to school.

Because of changes in the openings of schools and because of transportation issues, Woburn Superintendent of Schools Paul Andrews held "calling" hours over Labor Day weekend.

Under the current contract, a bus costs $27,900 a year - or $195 per day.

As it stands now, some of Woburn's 16 buses may eventually have to be cut but even in cases of new sidewalks, trees will not.

---According to state law, anyone living beyond a two-mile radius of school must be bused.

Bottom budget line for riders. Bottom budget line for nonriders. Any overrides out there?

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Folks, knowledge is useless if it isn't used. It's like having a beautiful singing voice and being silent. It is a betrayal to our Creator from whom that gift was received. It's like an unopened packet of flower seeds - never planted, so their full potential of a garden filled with a beautiful explosion of breathtaking colors never revealed and its fragrance never discovered. It behooves each one of us to unlock and release the treasure given to us. We must share its uplifting qualities with others and they can reciprocally share their wonderful attributes with us.

My Aunt Nora from Wilmington, on her weekly short two-hour visit, looked over my shoulder as I was typing and exclaimed, "Exactly what talent are you sharing with your readers - those stupid old jokes, puns and quips that I heard when I fell out of the cradle? The antics of that nutty nephew of yours, Dennis Tully? Maybe you think the stories of those two old fogies, the late John Shea and Rowan Fitzgerald are funny?" "Auntie," I replied, "how is it that you always plan your visits when I'm typing Woodchips?" She laughed (and that's rare) and said, "Kathy calls me on the phone and tells me when you are about to start typing and I rush right over."

Some people are sometimes afflicted with an occupational ailment such as - carpenters are prone to ingrown "toenails"; fire-fighters suffer from "heartburns"; football coaches may have "bad backs"; bee keepers may break out in "hives"; undertakers have "coffin" spells; plumbers may get "wrenched" shoulders; lawyers get sick with a "brief case of the grip"; cooks get "stir-crazy"; automobile muffler installers may become "exhausted!"; and proof-readers who review this material may want to give up and become "sky divers." My Aunt Nora just left, mumbling, grumbling and stumbling out the door saying, "I just don't believe they publish this nut's writings."

Doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark. You know what you are doing but no one else does. It took weeks of practice before I could pronounce the name, Father Ernest Tourigney, correctly. Then last Sunday morning, a lovely old parishioner greeted this wonderful charismatic "Man of the Cloth" with "Good morning Father T." Gee, I wish it would be as easy as that to pronounce the names of Sgt. Robert Sobolewski, Charles Panagopoulos and Christine Kaczynski.

My nephew, Dennis Tully, discovered what solar energy is when he sat on a hot rock at Hampton Beach last summer. The Chinese invented spaghetti - they certainly used their noodles. They also invented dynamite. When I told that to Richie Rebidue of Lynnfield he replied, "Woodchipper, if brains were dynamite, you wouldn't have enough to blow your nose!"

Woodchips Personality Winners: Capt. Jim McDermitt, Firefighters Paul Kearney, Kevin Wynne, Lt. Joseph Rolli and Chris Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Thompson and Dick Coughlin, all of Stoneham; Charles Glavin (owner of King's), Elmer Gratecy, Bob and Dot Peters, Joseph and Maryjane Langone, Jim and Joanne Russo, Frank and Barbara Scalse and Paul and Rose Raposo, all of Wilmington; Eleanor Corey, Pamela Miller, Suzanne Murray, Melanie Walton and Ed Sargent, all of Tewksbury; Coach Bruce Colby, Barbara Enos, Bob Killian, Kenneth Lucci, Janet Kaliika, Football tri-captains Kevin Donie, Scott Demetri and Michael Barnes, all of North Reading; James and Kathleen Breenan (Woodchips congratulates this lovely couple on their 50th wedding anniversary), Tracey Tenney, Esther Mazza, Tina Storti and Jimmy and Angie Quinno, all of Woburn; Coach Joe Dillon and Captains Joe Capaldo and Chris Brooks, all of Burlington; Paul Mahoney (of Mahoney's Garden Centers), Anna Foley and her handsome grandson, Father Thomas Foley of St. Eulalia's Church in Winchester.

Folks, I'm sure many of you have heard the expression, "He's in Hot Water!" meaning, of course, that the person is in trouble. Well, that applies to "Cold Water," too. Like a person falling through thin ice into the freezing water of a pond or lake, or a person may fall out of a boat, or a car with its passengers may go out of control down the end of a pier and into the water. Fortunately many fire departments and police have scuba diving recovery teams like the MDC unit based at the Charles River Basin in Boston. My friend, MDC officer Jimmy Bruce, is a member of that unit. They have their own rescue boat or they can be dropped by helicopter at the scene of a water accident. He has been awarded many citations for his heroic rescues. There are many from this area in that unit and I'm proud of all of them.

Bob Giguere is a man who has everything but the money to pay for them. Many of you boxing fans remember, I'm sure, Beau Jack. He was a ferocious fighter in the ring and docile as a lamb outside of it. A reporter interviewing him before a fight, knowing that he was a very religious man, asked him, "Do you pray to win before each fight?" Beau Jack smiled and replied, "I pray that I do my very best and my opponent does his best so the fans will watch a good fight. If I pray to win and my opponent prays to win, tell me sir, who is God going to listen to?" Folks, just think of that wonderful answer from a man who didn't go further than the fifth grade in school. Woodchip's advice to football players, baseball players or basketball players, etc., "Pray to do the best you can and if your opponents do the same, everyone will be a winner."

I remember when I was a door-to-door salesman. My first two orders were, "Get out and Stay out." One day I asked a young boy sitting on his front steps, "Hey kid, is your mother home?" "Yes, she is," he replied. After what seemed to be five minutes of pushing on the door bell button, then rapping and even kicking the door a couple of times, I turned to the laughing boy and said, "I thought you said that your mother was home." "She is," he shouted, but this isn't my house - I live across the street!" I gave the smart aleck kid something to remember me by, a leaking fountain pen.

I'm going to have my Woodchips Most Beautiful Blue Eyes Contest again - so far I have Amy O'Hara, Maureen Chamberlain, Peg McCarthy, Nellie Murphy, Lisa Lambert and Gina Aloisi as entrants.

Saturdays and Sundays are the strongest days of the week because all the others are "weak days." Folks, the more we have the more we have to worry about. Please don't be like by family - junk collectors! I would build a shelf and it would get filled. I'd build another shelf and that would get filled in no time. So, the rule in my house is this, "No more darn shelves," buy a new vacuum cleaner - throw the old one out. Oh-oh, Kathy is trying to "push" me out the door.

"City Hall," said a sweet melodious switchboard lady's voice at Woburn City Hall. "Is this really City Hall?" asked an apparent nervous unbelieving woman. "Yes, it is ma'am. To whom do you wish to speak?" "Oh no one, I guess. You see, I found this telephone number on a piece of paper in my husband's coat pocket.

Many doctors, nurses and others in medicine are devout church members. They see the masterpiece that is the human body and they know it is the work of an "Omnipotent Creator." Woodchips joins them and others singing in joyful adoration, "Oh Lord, How Great Thou Art."

The Super Star of the week is Rev. Martin Ryan, S.J.

At Winchester Hospital

Junior volunteers very important

The nation's nursing shortage and rising health care costs are familiar issues, and people are working every day to seek creative solutions.

One department is essential in helping Winchester Hospital to meet those challenges successfully. It provides consistent, capable aid in countless ways, and has been doing so since the hospital was founded. That department is Volunteer Services.

Over 600 volunteers, from ages 14 to 89, contributed over 37,000 hours of service to the hospital last year.

Each day this summer young people from eight area towns helped the Volunteer Department at Winchester Hospital provide services to patients and help to the hospital's staff.

Over seventy members of the hospital's Junior Volunteer group worked on morning, afternoon and evening shifts in several areas of the hospital.

Dressed in candy striped uniforms, they greeted patients at the registration desk, transported patients, distributed supplies and x-rays to hospital departments, delivered mail and flowers to patients and served in the hospital's coffee shop.

"The Junior Volunteers have provided not only a service resource to Winchester Hospital but also a spark to the entire hospital that is readily known and acknowledged by patients, staff and visitors," says Gail Brickley, junior volunteer coordinator. "The dedication and commitment by these young people is a refreshing reminder that there are caring teenagers who have a genuine concern for others."

The Junior Volunteer program, which continues afternoons and weekends through the year, are encouraged to call 729-9000, Ext. 3094 for information or an appointment to talk to Mrs. Brickley.

Communities represented by Junior Volunteers this past summer included

Burlington, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, Wilmington, Winchester and Woburn.

HAL HOLBROOK IS MARK TWAIN

The Bank of Boston Celebrity Series is pleased to present the return engagement of Hal Holbrook in his legendary performance of Mark Twain Tonight! on October 13 and 14 at the Opera House. Performances will begin at 8 p.m.

Hal Holbrook's performance of Mark Twain Tonight! has never failed to transport audiences into another century - and right into the presence of America's greatest humorist, Mark Twain. The Twain characterization grew out of an honors project Holbrook worked on while a student at Denison University after World War II. He and his first wife constructed a two-person show, playing characters from Shakespeare to Twain. After graduation in 1948, they toured the show on the school assembly circuit in the Southwest. Holbrook's first solo appearance as Twain was at the Lock Haven State Teachers College, Pennsylvania, in 1954.

In 1959, after five years of researching his character and material and honing it in front of audiences in small towns all over America, Hal Holbrook opened Mark Twain Tonight! in a tiny theater off-Broadway in New York. It was a stunning success, and after a twenty-two week run in New York, he toured the country again and twice performed for President Eisenhower and at the Edinburgh Festival.

Hal Holbrook has toured Mark Twain Tonight! in some part of every year since 1954, thus making 1989 the 35th consecutive year for this remarkable one-man show. Holbrook adds to his Twain material nearly every year, editing and changing it to fit the times. He has no set show - he makes up the program as he goes along.

Tickets for Mark Twain Tonight!, priced at $28, $22 and $15, go on sale beginning Monday, October 2 at the Opera House box office and through Ticketron, 1-800-382-8080. Group rates for 10 or more people are available by calling 482-2595.

The 1989-90 Bank of Boston Celebrity Series is supported in part by Bank of Boston, with generous grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Massachusetts Council on the Arts & Humanities.

"BARRY MANILOW ON BROADWAY"

Barry Manilow will bring his critically-acclaimed Broadway show to the Wang Center for the Performing Arts in Boston for a four-day engagement running Monday, October 30 through Thursday, November 2.

Originally titled "Barry Manilow At The Gershwin," his Broadway show opened on April 18, 1989 at New York's Gershwin Theatre to rave reviews, and played to SRO houses for eight weeks. The evening includes anecdotes and stories from Manilow's career, interpreted through music and humorous sketches, and includes a show-stopping 30-minute medley highlighting his greatest hits. One of the top-selling Adult Contemporary artists of all time, Manilow has scored 20 Top Five hits, beginning with "Mandy" in 1975. Earlier this year, he released his 20th album, Barry Manilow.

Tickets for "Barry Manilow On Broadway" are priced at $35.75, $33.25 and $29.25 each and are now on sale at the Wang Center box office, 268 Tremont St., Boston, at all Ticketmaster outlets and by telephone charge through Ticketmaster at (617) 787-8000. Ticket prices include a 75 cent Wang Center restoration charge. For further information, call the Wang Center at (617) 482-9393.

NORTH SHORE NEW FALL CHILDREN'S SERIES

After a successful Summer Children's season, the North Shore Music Theatre has announced that it will follow up with a new Fall Saturday season of children's musicals.

The season got underway September 23 with The Wizard of Oz, presented by the Yates Musical Theatre. Next on tap is Rosenhantz, which will be performing October 7. These popular recording artists have starred on natural television, at Carnegie Hall and are winners of the 1987 Parent's Choice Award.

Alice in Wonderland will be presented October 21 by the Yates Musical Theatre. The musical characters include Alice, Tweedle-Dee, Tweedle-Dum, Humpty Dumpty and the Lewis G. Carroll gang as they venture to wonderland.

Babes in Toyland will be presented November 18 by TheatreWorks, U.S.A. This fun-filled tale features colorful sets, songs and dance to combine with Victor Herbert's timely music including "The March of the Toy Soldiers" and "Toyland."

As a special holiday treat, But I'm Just a Kid at Christmas will be presented November 25 by Children's Hour Productions. The original rock 'n roll show for kids comes back for a holiday show with dazzling effects and festive songs.

All performances will be on Saturday at 9:15 and 11:45 a.m. For further information on the Fall Children's Series call the box office at (508) 922-8500 or 1-800-649-7125 in Eastern Mass or 1-800-548-2455 in other New England areas.

THREE APPLES STORY-TELLING FESTIVAL IN HARVARD

New England ghost tales, Bahamian riddles, contemporary comedy, and gospel music are only part of the fifth Three Apples Storytelling Festival, which returns to Harvard October 13 through 15 with performers at the forefront of the national storytelling revival. The Three Apples festival combines storytelling programs with music, mime, masks and puppetry in a week-end of performances and workshops to entertain the whole family.

Featured performers include Don Davis, with Appalachian tales; Linda Goss, Philadelphia's official storyteller; folk musician, raconteur and hammer dulcimer player extraordinaire John McCutcheon; and award-winning storytellers Laura Simms, Judith Black, Jennifer Justice and Bill Harley among others.

Events begin Friday, October 13 with a free "Shakes and Shivers" program for children ages 6 to 12 at 4 p.m. in Harvard's Town Hall, (funded by the Harvard Arts Council), and a similar, but more chilling program that evening for adults. At Saturday's "Family-Fest," children and adults can choose from a wide selection of storytelling programs and workshops all day. Saturday evening, two comedy programs offer festival goers a choice of contemporary comedy or traditional down home humor. Last year's performances were standing room only, so reservations are recommended. Sunday includes a free adult performance of stories and gospel music, a children's program with Bill Harley and John McCutcheon, and other adult and family storytelling sessions. The festival comes to a close on Sunday afternoon with the storytelling of Doug Lipman and fine folk and hammer dulcimer music of John McCutcheon.

Prices for single events range from $4 to $8. A week-end family pass to all programs for one or two adults and children under 12 is $60; an individual week-end pass is $40. For further ticket information and registration, call the Three Apples Box Office at (617) 628-5865.

THE KING AND I IN REVERE

The King and I, directed by Lori Sinatra and produced by The Next Door Theatre Inc., will be performed at Revere High School Auditorium on the nights of November 3, 4, 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10 at the door, $8 for children. Group rates are available.

For more information, call 289-0256.

Fall flight of ducks expected to be smaller this year

The 1989 fall population of migrating ducks is expected to be slightly smaller than last year, according to the annual fall flight forecast issued by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Canadian Wildlife Service.

The 1989 fall duck flight index is estimated at 64 million, down from 66 million in 1988. It is the second lowest fall flight index since such projections began in 1969, with the record low being 62 million set in 1985.

The fall flight projection is based on the results of spring surveys of duck breeding population and July surveys of habitat and production. The 1989 breeding duck population dropped because of last year's severe drought, which devastated prairie wetlands where ducks nested and resulted in fewer young birds being produced to enter this year's breeding population. The 1989 breeding population for ducks and all surveyed areas was just under 31 million, down 8 percent from last year and 24 percent below the long-term average from 1955-88. Nine of ten key species declined, with canvasbacks showing the only increase. Numbers of northern pintails, blue-winged teal, and scaup hit record lows.

Despite increased snow and rainfall over the past winter and spring, many wetlands have not recovered from the prolonged drought of the 1980's. Although duck production remains significantly below average..

Canada geese - Most populations will experience a fall flight similar to last year, with some expectation.
